What happens when a doctor is convicted?

Loxley could face denial; may need support network

By M.J. RICHARDS
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

What happens to a medical doctor when he is convicted of a misdemeanor in a court of law?

Dr. Sidney S. Loxley, a Great Bridge resident of Chesapeake with orthopedic practices on Battlefield Boulevard in Great Bridge and on Independence Boulevard in Virginia Beach was recently convicted of contributing to the delinquency of a minor in Chesapeake Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court.

Loxley, who had a sexual affair with a 17-year-old Great Bridge girl, has appealed the case to Chesapeake Circuit Court. A date will likely be set for mid-September.

Dr. Maureen McCarthy, Chesapeake Community Services Board community relations director, said that a number of scenarios could face Loxley, depending on whether or not he is convicted in his appeal.

"I think it's very hard to predict, because of his social standing . . ."

McCarthy said she is not familiar with the precise details of the case and does not know what Loxley's personal and professional lives entail.

If McCarthy were handling this case, she said she would consider the ethical, personal, emotional and psychological effects on both him and those around him.

"I think it's very hard to predict, because of his social standing in the community," said McCarthy.

In general, however, if Loxley is convicted, McCarthy said he would probably behave as many prisoners do that feel they are unjustly punished.

"Primarily in shock," said McCarthy. "Because they go from being a private citizen to becoming a criminal. Loss and lots of denial."

Because Loxley is appealing the case, McCarthy said he probably believes he has done nothing wrong. Going to jail would bring on denial and shock.

"The Board of Medicine is empowered to take various actions for various violations."

Wayne Farrar, director of public information for the Virginia Department of Health Professions Administration

"The fact that you were once a 'Dr. So-and-So' and somebody, and now you're just a number, is a huge shock," she said.

From a clinical standpoint, a therapist would look at the patient's history, to see what caused the incident or incidents.

"They confront the mid-life crisis, tension in marriage," said McCarthy. "Also, a look at his own family's behavioral patterns would be considered."

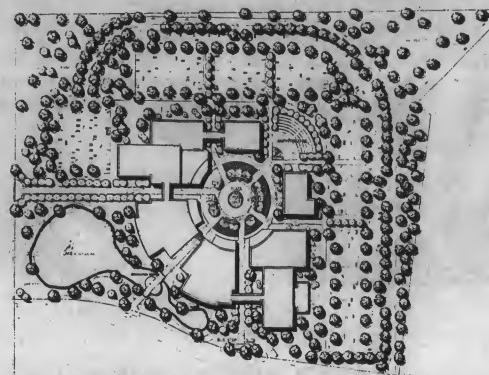

"One of the clinical things we would ask is, looking at his own family of origin and see what type of dysfunctional problems he would have, and if he had any serious past interpersonal relationship problems," said McCarthy.

Another issue to consider would be the person's sexual identity.

"Can he relate to mature women or to young women, or what we would call a young child?" McCarthy said. "Does he get more sexual pleasure out of a young child than is his own age or own peer? That would certainly be a clinical issue."

McCarthy said that if Loxley does go to prison, one of the hardest things

Council may donate 35 acres to ODU, NSU

Land is valued at $35,000 per acre

By LEE CAHILL
Virginia Beach Sun City Council Reporter

Donating a site for a higher education park off Princess Anne Road won't give the city a "Virginia Beach University," but it will provide an opportunity in the city for graduate study and a baccalaureate program under the state college system.

City Council was to decide this week whether to contribute 35 acres south of Tidewater Community College on Princess Anne Road for the establishment of a higher education center operated by Old Dominion University and Norfolk State University.

When the proposal was described last week at a Council work session, the climate appeared to be favorable. However, Councilmember Nancy Parker remarked that the site was valuable.

James Lawson, city real estate agent, said that no appraisals of the property have been made, but as it is - it isn't zoned commercial or industrial which would probably be its best use and bring the highest price - the land is worth $35,000 an acre and upwards. Public Works Director Oral Lambert said that land in the vicinity is selling for approximately $50,000 an acre.

The tract is part of an approximately 500-acre tract the city owned at one time. The city conveyed approximately 100 acres to Tidewater Community College, and other parts of the property make up Princess Anne Park and the Farmers Market and sites for the city utility yard, truck maintenance center and a pumping station. Lawson said that about 150-160 acres remain unused.

The site being discussed for the education park has been considered for a number of uses including a ballfield.

Under the plan proposed by the two Norfolk universities, the institutions would develop a comprehensive higher education center on the site. The two universities now lease space in an office building on Virginia Beach Boulevard.

HIGHER EDUCATION

Virginia Beach City Council recently discussed a proposal to contribute 35 acres on Princess Anne Road toward the establishment of a higher education center operated by Old Dominion University and Norfolk State University.

The land, priced at about $35,000 per acre is part of what was once a 500-acre parcel of land, of which 150 to 160 acres remain unused.

A variety of undergraduate and graduate coursework ranging from engineering and business to social work and education. The spring enrollment at the school was 2,000. Enrollment has increased steadily since the center was opened three years ago.

The center is running out of space. The educators also want to expand the programs.

One new program would enable some students to complete a bachelor's degree program by taking two years of study at the community college and the final two years at the new

Both universities would continue to offer graduate work that would enable students to complete a broad election of master's degrees such as the M.B.A., M.S.W. and M.S. in education.

ODU president James V. Koch said that the proposed center would accommodate 6,000 students over a period of 10 years.

If the city donates the land, the universities plan to request the 1994 and 1996 General Assemblies for funds for construction.

City Manager James V. Spore said that in any contract between the city and the universities, the city would require the universities to provide a time frame for construction.

Virginia Beach has long been sensitive about being the largest city in the state, but lacking a state-supported college university. It is the largest city in the country without a public college or university.

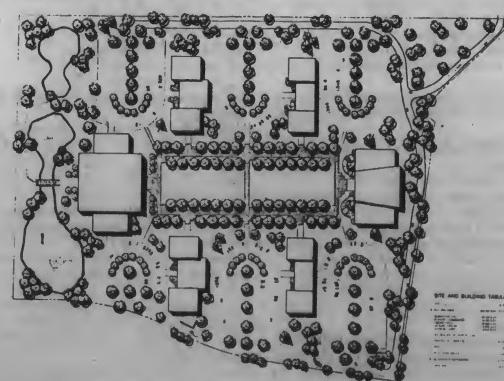

Councilmember Robert W. Clyburn asked about the chances for the institutions expanding into a University of Virginia Beach.

Koch made clear, however, that he and NSU President Harrison Wilson were "not here to establish the University of Virginia Beach but to provide comprehensive higher education" at the Virginia Beach site.

The two universities would continue to be in Norfolk. Koch said that ODU's Hampton Boulevard location in Norfolk would continue to be the only residential site for its 17,000 students

Boardwalkers move over, the trolley is right behind you

Complaints lead city to consider new people-movers

By JULIE C. BROWN
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

It's similar to when a car plows through a pack of birds on the street.

Just as fast as the birds fly away, so do the people scatter when a trolley car lumbers down the boardwalk.

What began in 1979 as a friendly gesture by the City of Virginia Beach to help move people up and down the boardwalk has turned into a nuisance for some.

But that could all change soon.

Due to a growing number of complaints from boardwalk joggers and walkers about the size of the trolleys, the city will take bids from companies to get a new means of boardwalk transportation, said Bill Pearson, superintendent of trolley operations.

Pearson expects that at least two bids will be submitted to contract new people-movers for next summer.

The San Francisco style trolleys are 8 feet wide and 30 feet long. They can't pass each other now because the boardwalk is only 16 feet wide, Pearson said.

Instead, they force anything in their path to clear out of the way.

"I hate that," grumbled Karen Raneri of Virginia Beach, as she maneuvered her roller blades to the side of the boardwalk.

"They're too big. They take up too much space on the boardwalk. You always have to move for them," she said.

"We'll take bids and see if we can get small vehicles out there," Pearson said. "We are hoping that they do get a replacement vehicle for the boardwalk."

An ideal transit system for the boardwalk would be similar to the train at Busch Gardens that runs from the parking lot to the gate.

"That would be fantastic," Pearson said.

But the problem with that type of system is that Virginia Beach charges a fare and there is no way to control people getting on and off, Pearson said.

"It would be fine if the city bought it and said don't charge a fare," he said. "But in order to control fare, you must have a controlled enter and exit system."

In addition, Pearson said the system at Busch Gardens probably costs an excess of $100,000, more than what most want to spend to improve the system.

The boardwalk trolleys could all end up behind the fence if plans go through to get a new boardwalk transit system. The city expects to receive at least two bids for the system.

But the cost of a new system would depend on what type the present system is replaced with, Pearson said. Now, it costs the city about $27 an hour to run the trolleys, Pearson said.

The fare is 5 cents per person. Once on the trolley, riders can view the ocean, check out the 15th Street pier from a distance or just kick back and watch joggers and leisurely walkers dodge the trolley.

In 1979, the city used Jeeps Renegades with trailers attached as people-movers on the boardwalk, Pearson said.

But about six or seven years ago, the Jeeps and trailers had to be replaced due to general wear and tear, Pearson said.

That's when the trolleys came in the picture.

If a new system is found, the present trolleys could be sold. Some have already been sold in the past to Front Royal, Virginia after being put up for auction, Pearson said.

"We are hoping that they do get a replacement vehicle for the boardwalk."

Bill Pearson, superintendent of trolley operation

Tidewater Regional Transit operates the trolleys, which run from Memorial Day to Labor Day from 6 p.m. to midnight during the summer, Pearson said.

By next Memorial Day, something new could be there.

Some think the idea is a waste.

"That's a lot of money just to put another system on the boardwalk," said Lisa Aliferi of Virginia Beach, who jogs on the boardwalk. "What's the deal, it's just a trolley."

Council plans to help Florida

Virginia Beach Sun City Council Reporter

It's natural for a coastal community like Virginia Beach to look at the devastation brought on by Hurricane Andrew in Florida and Louisiana and realize - there but for the grace of God go I.

So when Councilmember Paul J. Lanteigne suggested that City Council consider a resolution adopting a program to help beleaguered areas south of here, council was supportive.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf, using her network of mayors, contacted Daytona Mayor Larry Kelly for specific information on what the disaster areas would need. Oberndorf said that a lot of assistance sent to victims of Hurricane Hugo in South Carolina in 1989 ended up in landfills.

After Hugo, regional assistance organizations were formed under the Federal Emergency Management Act. The Virginia Beach Task Force of the regional organization includes 56 people from Virginia Beach and surrounding areas made up of doctors, structural engineers, paramedics, firefighters, and urban search and rescue teams. The task force was placed on an alert status by the latter part of last week.

During Hugo, teams of volunteers from Virginia Beach and some surrounding communities offered professional aid as well needed supplies.

HURRICANE HELP

City Council plans to help hurricane Andrew victims through an organization named COPE, in southern Florida.

Oberndorf learned from Kelly that an organization named COPE has been formed in Florida with headquarters in Tallahassee to coordinate efforts from other communities in the state and in other states.

Virginia Beach Fire Chief Harry Diezell is working with that organization to determine the specific needs in the hurricane areas. When the city learns what the needs are, Oberndorf said, arrangements will be made, perhaps with the Navy, to get the supplies - whether medicine, food or clothing - to the proper destinations.

During Hugo, volunteers from the police, fire and public works departments went to South Carolina to help restore the hit areas.

Chandler allegations raises questions

Omar Chandler, a national recording artist, was once known for the words "Joy and pain, and sunshine and rain" from his 1988 hit song "Joy and Pain."

But the joy is over. Once again, we see a national figure, who serves as a role model, in trouble with the law. Now, Chandler may be causing pain.

Chandler has been charged with sodomy, aggravated sexual battery and simple assault on a 15-year-old boy, allegedly, in Chandler's Honeybrook Court home.

Chandler has been part of a Virginia Beach movement against drugs and crime, and has worked with many of the city's youths.

Whether Chandler is guilty or innocent, the incident raises the question of some of the role models children have today. How many people are pretending to help young people and set good examples, when in fact they are harming them? — M.J.R.

Shut up and move over

City officials have been receiving complaints from joggers and walkers who have to dodge the boardwalk trolleys. And it's not surprising, because they do lumber down the boardwalk and tourists and locals alike must move out of their way.

Stop complaining.

The trolleys only run from Memorial Day to Labor Day and it's not that much of a bother to take a few steps sideways to get out of the way.

Ocean City, Md. has a smaller tram system set up on its boardwalks and it's no less of a pain to jump out of it's way. People still have to move and they also hear an annoying, "Watch the tram car, please."

It's not worth spending a lot of money to replace the trolleys simply because they bother a few people during the summer. — J.C.B.

Kudos Kempsville!

Recently, the National Soccer Coaches Association of America/Gatorade poll named the 1992 Kempsville High School Boys' Soccer team the best in the country for spring soccer. The poll was released by the Soccer Journal.

The team finished 23-1, its only loss being to Salem. However, the team later beat Salem twice and went on to win its second consecutive State Group AAA title.

A lot of time and hard work went into winning the title and it paid off in the end. Now, the boys can savor their victory by their number one ranking. Or they can work even harder and win again next year.

Keep up the good work and congratulations, Kempsville! — J.C.B.

THE SOMBER DAY

Dripping here so far away
On this cool and calming day.
Land around me passes by.
Solemn trees stand tall yet shy.
Wind now feels my stiffened face,
As it crawls at one slow pace.
Time is gone, and sound is bare.
Birds fly by without a care.
Sheets of gray surround the sun,
Floating over what's been done.
Tears stream down from eyes so high,
As creatures' lives keep passing by.

Bill and George don't deserve to win even a point

By M.J. RICHARDS

Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

By the end of the Democratic Party National Convention, most Virginia Beach residents had been told repeatedly how the Republican Party could not be trusted.

Rumors of President George Bush's former affair with an aide swung into the public eye as soon as the Republican Party National Convention began.

Meanwhile, Republicans continued to banter about Democratic candidate Bill Clinton's affair with Jennifer Flowers.

The two parties continue to make allegations that the other party repeated lies to country and cannot be trusted.

But in the next sentence, these same accusers say they cannot understand why so many Americans have lost faith in the government and don't vote.

It does not take a genius to figure this out. Perhaps our politicians need a lesson in voter history and psychology.

When you are repeatedly told by two opposing sides the one is lying, who do you believe? Neither.

When people have a cause, they vote.

When people believe that their government will listen, they vote. When they think they are being jerked around by lying, mud-slinging politicians whose only concern is money and power, they don't want to vote.

Some voters will mark the ballot anyway, in compliance of the theory of the "lesser of two evils."

But what does that do for democracy?

What Americans should do is write letters to Bush, Clinton and the hundreds of other political mud-slingers, and tell them to put a lid on it.

The purpose of campaigning is for candidates to tell the people what they can do for the country, not what the other guy can't.

Until Bill and George figure this out, neither one deserves to win so much as a brownie point.

Mayor will race in a Mini Grand Prix

Have you ever thought about racing down the streets of Monaco, qualifying for the Indianapolis 500, or taking the checkered flag at the Daytona 500? Well, these race achievements may not be possible for you or me, but on Labor Day weekend some of us will have the rare opportunity to experience the thrill of Grand Prix auto racing in the Virginia Beach Mini Grand Prix.

On Saturday, Sept. 5, Budweiser and Shell Oil will be presenting the first Mini Grand Prix to be held in our city. All the excitement of professional racing, including pit crews and time trials, will become reality at the event, which benefits the Arthritis Foundation.

I am pleased and proud to compete in this unique fundraiser, which has visited 20 other major cities across the country. At 10 a.m. on Saturday, I'll take the wheel of my specially designed, five-horsepower miniature race car for the time trials, taking place at 19th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

The race itself will begin at noon, when I'll be competing with local celebrities, business and community leaders as we race through the oceanfront streets at speeds of up to 25 mph, hoping to take the green flag.

The Mini Grand Prix is just part of the excitement of our citywide, action-packed events agenda planned for you and your family this Labor Day weekend.

I am pleased and proud to compete in this unique fundraiser . . .

The Virginia Beach Offshore Grand Prix is expected to draw more than 80 powerboats from across the United States and around the world to compete at speeds of up to 140 mph. On the bay side of the city on Saturday, the 15th annual "Low Rent" Catamaran regatta will be launched. And, back on the oceanfront, the $10,000 East Coast Volleyball Championship will be held both Saturday and Sunday.

Also on the tap for the weekend are the Grand Prix Parade of Power and the Grand Prix Fireworks, both scheduled for Friday night, the Oceanfront "Salute the Military" 8K run, and the 21st annual Marin tournament.

Special family events include children's activities and nightly entertainment all along the boardwalk throughout the weekend.

I hope you'll enjoy our summer close-out celebration, and I'll see you at the Mini Grand Prix on Saturday. Wish me luck!

Public money for private schools

This week's article was written by Vickie Hendley, VBEA Vice President.

The National Education Association's executive director Don Cameron, addressing the 1992 NEA representative assembly stated, "Day by day, for 12 long years of the Reagan and Bush administration, the assault on public education and the advocacy for privatization have increased. You don't have to be clairvoyant to predict that, if George Bush is re-elected, the trend will not only continue, but escalate." The Bush record on education has been harmful to public education students by continually denying much needed resources in programs such as Head Start and by proposing education budgets that don't keep pace with inflation. Now the President wants to spend $500 million on vouchers that would go to private and religiously affiliated schools.

The dilemma of public schools today is that they have not solved the problem of educating pupils who do not come to school ready to learn. Not all students entering the hallowed halls of public education have adequate nutrition and medical care or involved parents. Can these problems be solved by encouraging choice/voucher systems that take money from public schools? I think not!

Many public schools today are highly effective.

This shrewd business of public money for private schools could easily create an elitist education system with no accountability to the public. Private schools are allowed to set their own admission and suspension policies. In public schools, we firmly believe that American parents are sending us the best that they have - All of their children.

Every child in America should have the right to contribute to America's destiny by sharing part of the American dream. Only a quality, public school system can guarantee that opportunity.

Can we guarantee that quality system by taking money from public schools? Are we not setting up a vicious cycle of failure when we continually ask public schools to do more with less? The United States currently ranks 14th out of 16 industrialized nations in spending on K-12 education. I but escalate." The Bush record on education has been harmful to public education students by continually denying much needed resources in programs such as Head Start and by proposing education budgets that don't keep pace with inflation. Now the President wants to spend $500 million on vouchers that would go to private and religiously affiliated schools.

The rationale for the popular choice/voucher system stems from research that indicates public schools are not doing their job. Current research, however, is showing there has been a "deliberate presentation of misinformation in regard to public schools" according to noted author David Berliner. Public schools are actually doing a better job of educating than ever before.

When the students of today are matched by economic status, gender and class rank with similar students of the 1970s, research shows they are performing significantly better. We have continually been assaulted with statistics that

Heischober is named to board

Virginia Beach Sun City Council Reporter

By a 7 to 4 vote, numbers that have become common in the voting of the City Council that came into power in July, former Councilmember Harold Heischober was appointed to the Chesapeake Bay Preservation Commission Board over former Councilmember Barbara Henley.

The line-up in last week's vote stood at Nancy Parker, Robert K. Dean, John D. Moss, and Mayor Meyer Oberndorf for Henley and Vice Mayor William D. Sessions, Jr., Paul J. Lanetigne, Robert W. Clyburn, James W. Brazier, Jr., John A. Baum, Louis R. Jones and Linwood O. Branch III, for Heischober.

Henley has been closely associated with environmental issues and Heischober with business and growth issues.

Heischober will fill the unexpired term of the late Dean Lee. The term expires on Dec. 31.

Hurricane Andrew and a typhoon named Karen destroy

The devastation wrought by Hurricane Andrew, as he ploughed through southern Florida and Louisiana, has brought back memories of an unforgettable night of terror I experienced 30 years ago when Typhoon Karen struck the tiny island of Guam.

Hurricane Andrew is now described as the costliest natural catastrophe in United States history.

Typhoon Karen was called the most treacherous storm in the history of the Pacific. The anemometer broke when her winds reached 208 mph.

Today, I can empathize with Andrew's victims. My heart goes out to those who lost their loved ones and to those who lost all material possessions in the wake of this ferocious storm. Along with the trees, their lives have been uprooted, and things will never be the same again.

Man cannot control nature's power of wind and water. But, through modern technology of radar, satellites and surveillance planes, forecasters were able to issue early warnings. Thus, even greater tragedy was averted.

In November 1962, we were living in Guam where my husband served as staff legal officer to ComNavMarianas. When Typhoon Karen struck, she was no lady. Descending like a wild woman, she left the island totally devastated.

The Naval officers had been called to a safe underground communication and operations center. The wives and children were left in their "typhoon-resistant" homes to cope with the storm. Our quarters were atop Nimis Hill.

telephone lines were down and there was no electricity or running water.

When I looked outside, I could not believe my eyes. There was not a leaf on the banana trees or shrubs. The palm trees were uprooted or broken. Even the blades of grass were stripped. What had been a lush tropical scene the day before was a barren wasteland. Some said it looked like a bomb had exploded. Another said, "Autumn has come to Guam."

SAC Headquarters at Anderson AFB issued this Report: As the 200 mile-per-hour winds of Typhoon Karen subsided early on the morning of Nov. 12, 1962, the storm-battered residents of Guam, military and civilian, emerged from their shelters in a scene of unparalleled destruction. Never before had Guam been so lashed by a storm; perhaps never before had any island in the Pacific been hit so hard by a typhoon. Government of Guam officials estimated that 90 percent of the island's homes and businesses had been destroyed or badly damaged, and military installations, though less ravaged than the civilian communities, had been badly hit.

On Guam, we were fortunate because the Navy and Air Force were there to provide man-power and equipment for the massive clean-up. But the problems left by Andrew are enormous. The Red Cross has set up shelters even though it has depleted its emergency funds. Immediate financial support to this worthy organization would be an effective way to show support for those who are without homes, jobs, food or clothing. Those communities have also lost churches, schools, banks, medical

51-year-old beach man killed

A 51-year-old Virginia Beach man was killed on Tuesday, August 11 and four other people injured in a three-vehicle accident at Virginia Beach Boulevard and Constitution Drive at approximately 2:08 p.m.

A 1989 Cadillac Allante convertible, driven by Martha Hanson-Walter, 56, of the 500 block of Mossy Cup Drive, Virginia Beach, was traveling south-bound on Constitution Drive and was attempting to cross Virginia Beach Boulevard, with a green traffic light. A 1984 Buick driven by a 17-year-old Virginia Beach girl traveling east on Virginia Beach Boulevard disregarded a red traffic light and impacted the Cadillac Allante in the intersection.

After impact, the Cadillac Allante was knocked into a 1985 Cadillac four-door, which was stopped on Constitution Drive northbound. The driver of the 1985 Cadillac was identified as Ivory Robinson Jr., 39, of the 100 block of Lockwood Court, Virginia Beach. He was treated at Sentara Bayside Hospital for minor injuries.

Beach Crime Report

A passenger in the Cadillac Allante was killed. He was identified as Victor Voigt, 51, of the 500 block Sirene Avenue, Virginia Beach. Voigt was knocked unconscious in the accident. Efforts to revive him at the scene were unsuccessful. He was transported to Sentara Bayside Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Also injured in the accident was the driver of the Cadillac Allante, Martha Hanson-Walter, 56, of the 500 block of Mossy Cup Drive, Virginia Beach. She was taken to Virginia Beach General Hospital, and had multiple injuries.

A passenger in Robinson's vehicle, his mother, Alice Robinson, 59, of the 100 block of Lockwood Court, Virginia Beach, was treated and released at Sentara Bayside Hospital with minor injuries.

It appeared all individuals were wearing seatbelts at the time of the accident. It was not an alcohol-related accident.

The 17-year-old Virginia Beach girl was also treated at Sentara Bayside Hospital and released. Her identity was withheld because charges are pending.

The case is being investigated by MPO F.D. Godwin of the Fatal Accident Crash Team.

Man, 73, charged with battery

A 73-year-old Virginia Beach man has been arrested in connection with the aggravated sexual battery of two Virginia Beach girls, ages 6 and 8.

The incidents occurred from Sunday, July 5 through Tuesday, August 25 at the suspect's residence.

Arrested and charged with three counts of aggravated sexual battery is Curtis G. Mills, also known as "Pops," age 73, of the 6100 block of Lexington Court.

Mills was being held in the Virginia Beach City Jail on a $5,000 surety bond.

The case is being investigated by Detective K.P. Rexroad and Detective J.L. Schuler of the Investigative Division's Sex Crime Unit.

White male, 30 to 35, robs bank

A Virginia Beach bank was robbed on Tuesday, August 25 at approximately 4 p.m. A lone white male entered the Princess Anne Commercial Bank in the 2200 block of West Great Neck Road and approached the teller line.

He implied a weapon to one of the tellers and demanded money. The teller handed him an undetermined amount of U.S. currency, and the suspect fled the bank.

The suspect is described as a white male, approximately 30- to 35-years-old, 5' 8" tall, approximately 160 pounds, brown hair, possibly one or two days growth of beard, a mustache and a olive or tan complexion.

He was wearing a blue ball cap, sunglasses, black T-shirt with "Logan" printed on the breast pocket, jeans and dress shoes.

He was seen fleeing the area in a late '70s or early '80s model maroon Subaru hatchback, toward the area of Cape Henry Road.

The case is being investigated by Detective K.A. Miller of the Investigative Division's Robbery Squad.

Anyone with suspect information is asked to call Virginia Beach Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Callers remain anonymous and could be eligible for up to a $1,000 reward with information leading to an arrest.

Man charged with sexual battery

A 25-year-old Virginia Beach man has been arrested in connection with the Friday, August 21 aggravated sexual battery of an 8-year-old Virginia Beach girl and a 12-year-old Virginia Beach boy.

The Virginia Beach man was babysitting for the two children when the incident occurred. He lured the 8-year-old girl away from the residence where he was babysitting and into his apartment to look at his computer, at which time the attack occurred. He also showed the 12-year-old boy various pornographic pictures.

Investigators executed a search warrant and have confiscated various items as evidence from the apartment. Investigators have arrested Roland E. Jones, Jr., 25, of the 100 block of South Gum Avenue in the Thalia section of the city. He has been released by a magistrate on a $25,000 surety bond.

The investigation is continuing and investigators have concern that there could be other neighborhood children that were victimized.

Parents should contact Detective D.G. Adams of the Investigative Division's Sex Crime Unit at 427-4101, if they suspect their child may have been a victim.

Beach man arrested for molestation

Virginia Beach police recently arrested Omar Chandler, 30, of the 4400 block of Honeybrook Court on one count each of sodomy, aggravated sexual battery and simple assault.

Chandler is accused of molesting a 15-year-old Virginia Beach boy while the boy was a guest in Chandler's home. This offense allegedly occurred approximately three months ago. Chandler was arrested Friday, Aug. 21 about 8 p.m. and was released on a $10,000 bond.

This case is being investigated by Detective T.E. Lewis of the department's Investigative Division.

Info sought on murder of NSU student

Earlier this year a 22-year-old former Norfolk State student and Marine Corp reservist was killed. The case has not been solved and Virginia Beach Crime Solvers is offering a reward for information that will lead to an arrest.

On Sunday, February 9, about 3:30 a.m., Jason Walker left The Bridge nightclub in the Newport shopping center on Newtowm Road, after a performance by rap artist Doo Doo Brown.

As he was driving his red Chevrolet Baretta through the parking lot, a man on the sidewalk was shooting a pistol. One of the bullets shattered Walker's car window and struck him in the head. He was flown to the hospital but died a short time later as a result of the injury.

The only information police have is that the gunman was black, about 5' 10" tall, and was wearing a black leather jacket.

Anyone with information should call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Information is confidential and callers are not required to give a name to collect a cash reward of up to $1,000.

Matthews shot in chest at beach

A shooting occurred in the 1500 block of Atlantic Avenue on Wednesday, August 19 at 12:30 a.m. The victim, identified as Kenneth W. Matthews, 19, of the 100 block of Broad Street, Portsmouth, was shot in the chest after a confrontation with the suspect.

Matthews was transported by rescue to Virginia Beach General Hospital for treatment and was expected to be released later.

Investigators are looking for James Madden Carter for questioning in the shooting. His last known address was the 600 block of Fire Fall Drive, Virginia Beach.

The case is being investigated by Detective S.W. Hoffman of the Investigative Division's Homicide Squad.

Anyone with information on Carter's whereabouts is asked to call Virginia Beach Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Callers remain anonymous and could be eligible for up to a $1,000 reward with information leading to an arrest.

Woman assaulted at job interview

A Virginia Beach personnel agency manager has been charged in the August 11, sexual assault of a 21-year-old Norfolk woman during a job interview.

The incident occurred between 3 and 5 p.m. at the agency located in the 200 block of Independence Boulevard. The victim reported the assault to police after the interview.

Investigators have charged George M. Arnett, 46, of the 3400 block of Galerry Road in Chesapeake, with sexual battery. He has been released on a $750 personal recognizance bond.

The case is being investigated by Detective R. Manzione of the Investigative Division's Sex Crime Unit.

Helping Older Americans See Their Future

People rely on their vision more than any other sense to live actively and independently. Because vision loss can have a major impact on a person's lifestyle, it is important to make older adults aware of the eye conditions and diseases they are at risk of developing, and the need for annual eye exams.

Any change in or loss of vision is a cause for concern and for visiting an eye care specialist. An eye exam can determine if these changes are symptoms of a serious disorder. Some conditions require only minor medical treatment.

Many older people find it harder to focus on objects that are nearby - a condition known as "presbyopia." Usually, presbyopia is corrected with prescription bifocal glasses or contact lenses. Sometimes older eyes make too many or too few tears - conditions referred to as "watery eye" or "dry eye." In most instances, special eye drops can be prescribed to alleviate these problems.

Aside from these conditions, there are four major eye diseases - cataracts, glaucoma, diabetic retinopathy and macular degeneration - that people over 65 are at special risk of developing. These diseases can result in a major loss of vision and independence if not treated promptly and properly. Older people need to know that the best way to protect and maintain their good vision is through eye exams that result in the early detection of these problems.

Cataracts are the leading cause of vision loss among older people - as well as the most easily treated. Cataracts occur when the eye's clear lens becomes cloudy (much as a camera lens may fog up). The clouding of the lens causes a grading loss of vision. During surgery, the natural lens of the eye is removed and replaced with an artificial one.

Cataract surgery is the most commonly performed operation. Typically, surgery is considered when the cataract is interfering with vision to a degree that impairs an individual's independent lifestyle. A person might delay or avoid treatment because of the fear of a lengthy recovery period and the dependency on family members. Recent technological advances, however, allow cataract surgery to be performed in most cases on an outpatient basis, with patients potentially able to return to normal activities with good vision within days.

People who have glaucoma lose their vision gradually - first side or peripheral vision, then gradually total sight. People who have glaucoma often experience no symptoms. Early detection is critical because irreversible vision damage can occur as glaucoma advances. Eye care specialists can easily detect glaucoma. In most cases, glaucoma can be controlled or its progression slowed with special eye drops. In other cases, patients may need to take drugs orally or have surgery. Compliance is critical for treating glaucoma. Some older adults are at even higher risk than others for this disease, including blacks and people on steroid medication, such as cortisone. People with diabetes or eye injuries or who have a history of the disease in their family are also at greater risk.

People who have diabetes are also at a high risk of developing diabetic retinopathy, a disease that significantly blurs people's vision and can cause major vision loss.

The treatments for this disease primarily include lasers and are effective only when the disease is detected early. Many people with diabetic retinopathy must use low-vision aids and services to make the most of the vision they retain.

The disease called macular degeneration causes people to lose their central vision. There are treatments which can be effective in many instances, but they also must be undertaken when the disease first starts. People who lose vision due to macular degeneration must often rely on low-vision aids and services to maintain their lifestyles.

It's important that health care professionals make older people aware of these diseases, their treatment and prevention. Eye exams usually cost between $40 and $80 a visit (depending upon location).

Annual eye exams are very important, since a person with an eye disorder may experience few or no symptoms and vision loss may be gradual to notice.

Samplers show art at Land House to kids

By VICKI R. HARVEY
Special to The Virginia Beach Sun

Explore the graceful art of stitching. Members of the Tidewater Sampler Guild will present a program appropriate for the entire family on Saturday, Sept. 12 at 2 p.m. at the historic Francis Land House on Virginia Beach Boulevard.

The afternoon's activities include a tour of the Sampler Guild's juried show and a tour of the Francis Land House. Families will learn how thread is processed into linen thread. The program will conclude with the members of the Sampler Guild teaching the children how to cross stitch a small initial sampler.

Registration is required. Call 340-1732 by Friday, Sept. 11. Fee:

Francis Land House

$1 and includes all supplies. Children must be accompanied by an adult.

The Francis Land House is a historic plantation home that provides tours of period rooms and special exhibits and offers special interpretive programs to the public.

The house is open Tuesday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday from noon to 5 p.m.

Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children ages 6 to 18. Children under 6 and members are free.

For more information call 340-1732.

Life-Saving Museum plans hurricane season exhibit

The Life-Saving Museum of Virginia celebrates the height of the hurricane season with "Batten Down the Hatches," an exhibit on coastal storms. The exhibit opens Tuesday, Sept. 8 and extends through Sunday, Oct. 18.

Included are photos of the Ash Wednesday Storm of 1962, hurricane tracking maps featuring tracks of some well-known hurricanes and other storm memorabilia.

The exhibit is free with museum admission. The Life-Saving Museum is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on Sunday from noon to 5 p.m.

As of Thursday, Oct. 1 the museum will be closed on Mondays.

Admission is $2.50 for adults, $2 for military and senior citizens, and $1 for young people, ages 6 to 18. The gift shop may be visited without charge.

The Life-Saving Museum of Virginia is housed in the former Virginia Beach Coast Guard Station. The building is a Virginia Historic Landmark on the National Register of Historic Places. Its exhibits tell the history of the Life-Saving/Coast Guard Service and stories of heroic shipwreck rescues.

International students visit Virginia Beach

The international student night, hosted by the Optimist Club of Central Virginia Beach, recently held Eastern Shore Chapel for foreign students attending Virginia Beach high schools. This event attracted 25 students from 13 different foreign countries.

Peggy Schrempp, a club member, was the event chairperson. The evening's program included a welcome by Maury Jackson, club president; an explanation of "Optimism," by Lee Cox, club member and former Optimist Capital-Virginia District governor; and a dissertation by each student on what country they were from, what they were studying, what they liked or disliked about America, and what they were going to do this summer.

Each student was presented with a copy of the Optimist Creed and will be sent an Honorary Citizen of Virginia Beach Certificate, signed by the mayor.

Included in the evening was a presentation of a "Partnership in Education" award to Mary Sue Crommell, forensic coach at First Colonial High School. The evening ended with social hour and refreshments. More than 75 students, Optimists and guests attended the evening's events.

The foreign students attending and their home country included: Simone Arle, Jan Moolok, and Oliver Voss from Germany; Anne Kupariene and Maanti Heinainen, from Finland; Nana Kijima, Akiko Miyamoto, Koze Nojima and Tomomi Yamamoto; from Japan; Daniela Korom, from Yugoslavia; And DeBock, from Belgium; Nathalie Garrel, from France; Jessica Janasson, Josef Daniel and Johan Maen, from Sweden; Ellen Wind Andersen, Christina Pedersen, Pia Rigbott and Lea Nielsen, from Denmark; Victoria Girbes, from Spain; Irina Blokhin, from Russia; Erik-Jan Kwinnen and Wieneke Mulder, from the Netherlands; and Corinne Ammann and Katrin Fischer, from Switzerland.

Historic self-guided tours of houses available

Special to The Virginia Beach Sun

Traditionally, young gentlemen of breeding and position in the 18th and 19th centuries travelled abroad on an extended journey known as the Grand Tour. Once in Europe, they were afforded the culture and graces of the continent's history. It was an opportunity that was luxurious, educational and highly enjoyable.

In keeping with that spirit, the history of Virginia Beach and Norfolk will be explored as local historic houses combine resources to present a grand tour of history on Saturday, Oct. 3, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Sunday, Oct. 4 from noon to 4 p.m.

A grand tour of history will be a unique cooperative effort involving two cities (Virginia Beach and Norfolk) and five historic foundations.

This self-guided tour provides an opportunity to experience four centuries of urban and rural history through interpretive programs and special presentations. The tour provides a comprehensive view of our regions rich history in a package unequalled for its economic value.

The cost is $10 for adults and $5 for children ages 6 to 12. This includes all entrance fees and special programs at the sites.

Tickets can be purchased in advance at any of the historic sites or can be obtained on the day of the tour. Participants may begin at any of the houses on the tour.

The grand tour in Virginia Beach includes the following historic houses:

Adam Thoroughgood House (ca. 1680), the oldest surviving structure in the area, contains a wonderful collection of 17th-century furniture. Native and English plants will be on display and their importance in medicinal remedies will be discussed as interpreters share recipes thought to cure even more than the common cold.

Lynnhaven House (1725), with classic hall and parlor design, represents the lifestyle of a middle-class planter/farmer. Special entertainment on Saturday will be provided by Track and Dreda McCreary on the Dulcimer. Featured on Sunday will be demonstrations of open hearth cooking.

Francis Land House (1732), a large Georgian style brick structure, was the plantation home of the Land family. Flax grown on the site will be process into linen thread much in the same way as the Land family would have done more than two centuries ago. The Tidewater Sampler Guild will present an exhibit of colonial style samplers.

Upper Wolfsnare (1759), built by the Wolfe family, was the home of a local representative to Virginia's Constitutional Ratification Committee. The house retains many outstanding original architectural details. A collection of fine old linens and quilts will be on display.

The grand tour in Norfolk includes the following historic sites:

Moses Myers House (1792), the urban home of a prosperous Jewish merchant, contains 70 percent of the furnishings original to the first generation of the Myers family. Discover some of the favorite "home cures" of the federal era housewife as interpreters present "In Sickness and In Health: 18th-Century Medical Practices."

Willoughby-Bayley House, constructed in 1794, was built by a prominent retail merchant and contractor who was descended from one of the areas earliest settlers. As at the Myers House, the tonics and purges used to ward off and cure diseases in the 18th century will be featured.

Hunter House Victorian Museum (1894), a Victorian town home, was built for a prominent merchant and banker. Experience the "Gay Nineties" as you cavendish on conversations presented by first person interpreters as they move about the house discussing political topics of the day or the latest in Parisian fashion.

The Hermitage Foundation Museum (1908), nestled in a lush wooded setting along the Lafayette River, is a 12-acre estate whose English Tudor-style home appears to have been displayed in time. The museum displays beautiful, detailed works of art spanning the globe and the millennia.

A box lunch will be offered at Free Mason Street Baptist Church on Saturday, Oct. 3, from noon to 1:30 p.m. The cost is $5.

Tudor treats will be offered free of charge at the Hermitage Foundation Museum on Sunday, Oct. 4.

The Princess Anne County/Virginia Beach Historical Society will have soft drinks, coffee, cookies and other sweets for purchase at Upper Wolfsnare on Saturday, Oct. 3 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Purchase tickets in advance for the annual pig and oyster roast, presented by the Lifesaving Museum of Virginia on Saturday, Oct. 3. For tickets and information call 422-1587.

Using public money for the private schools believe that by promoting choice, politicians can deny schools needed revenue at the same time they appear to be committed to improving education.

Commitment, not competition, will make the public schools stronger. NEA members share the public's interest in choice - that is - choice without losers. Choice found in alternative education programs, magnet schools and schools within schools a few examples of programs where every child wins. Research on effective schools has shown we need clear missions that concentrate on student outcomes and ensure that all students have access to a basic curriculum.

In addition, effective schools also organize to allow staff members to exercise initiatives and solve problems, rather than spend time meeting regulations and mandates. Such is the future of education in Virginia Beach. We are moving away from centralized bureaucracy towards site-based decision making. In the process, our curriculum will be driven by outcomes rather than objectives.

Politicians, educators and taxpayers would do well to focus on young today people our society is failing today. Concentrating motivated students and their parents in a few schools is not the answer for America. Choice/voucher programs will never go away as long as there are people who believe all children are not entitled to quality education - only the best and the brightest.

It behoves us as a nation to compare the cost of housing a prisoner (80 percent of whom are school drop outs) to the cost of adequately funding a child's education.

The NEA seeks comprehensive restructuring of America's schools that destandardizes decentralizes and democratizes the teaching/learning process. NEA and its state and local affiliates are actively involved in many restructuring experiments that promote these goals while keeping our system of universal, free public education accessible to all.

To borrow the words of Don Cameron, "Let us speak now for public education before it is too late. Let us act at the ballot box to tell this administration that America's public schools are no longer for sale. Let us defeat George Bush in 1992."

Ruritan had joint meeting

By BILL ROBINS
Special to The Virginia Beach Sun

About 375 Ruritans and guests, representing the seven clubs located in Chesapeake and the six clubs located in Virginia Beach, recently held their annual meeting at Deep Creek High School.

The Chesapeake/Virginia Beach area comprises Zone IV of the Holland District. Zone IV Governor, Stuart Ives, from the Creeds Club, presided at the annual "Zone IV Summer Meeting," which was an evening of fellowship and entertainment.

Following the call to order by Governor Ives, Curtis Shirley of the Creeds Club led the group in the singing of "America." John Wayne Abernathy of the Great Bridge Club gave an address on "What Ruritan Means to Me."

Kent Bayne, pastor of the Creeds Church of Christ, gave the invocation after which dinner, featuring barbecue, was served by the Deep Creek Club.

Entertainment was provided by the Commonwealth Chorus of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America under the direction of Bill Mayton.

The clubs presented contributions to the Ruritan National Foundation totalling $1,920, which were accepted by District Foundation Chairman George Winslow. The McCleeny family announced that they will make an additional contribution in memory of 1982 Zone Governor and past National Director Connie McCleeny in the amount of $1,000.

The slate of 1993 candidates for Zone IV Governor and lieutenant governor was presented by David Grimm on behalf of the nomination committee. Following a motion by Roger Keay, charter member and 1948 president of the Deep Creek Club, the membership unanimously elected Bill Robins of Deep Creek as 1993 zone governor and John Wayne Abernathy of Great Bridge as 1993 Lt. zone governor.

Lt. Zone Governor Bill Robins acknowledged the tremendous accomplishment of the South Norfolk Club, under the leadership of President Ray Connor, in increasing the club membership to 114. Out of over 1,400 Ruritan clubs throughout the United States, South Norfolk has recently joined the Deep Creek Club as the only Ruritan Club in existence with over 100 members.

Lt. Governor Robins then presented awards to the Deep Creek Club for having the most members present at the meeting, with 51 attending, to the Grassfield Club for having the highest percentage of members present, which was 51 percent and the individual certificates of appreciation Edward Vincen of the Grassfield Club and Chris Clark of the Deep Creek Club. Twelve of the 13 Zone IV clubs were represented, including three clubs, Deep Creek, Grassfield and Great Bridge, with over 50 percent of their membership in attendance.

After announcements of upcoming events, a drawing was held for the numerous door prizes donated by the clubs. District Ruritan Queen Kimberly Atwood drew the winning numbers. All prizes were won by the ladies in attendance.

Ray Connor of the South Norfolk Club led the Pledge of Allegiance. Kevin Dawson from Richmond, in Civil War attire, then reviewed the origin of "Taps," which he played on a bugle from the Civil War era, in memory of those Ruritans who have passed away during the past year.

Zone IV is the largest zone, located in the largest district, in Ruritan. Projects are as diverse as the membership, including scholarships, aid to the elderly and disabled, the recently completed "Clean the Bay Day," bins and many, many others that focus on improving the community in which each club is located.

If you are interested in participating in an organization that can use your talents and skills to help make your community a better place for yourself and your children contact the club next year.

For information call Governor-elect Bill Robins at 487-9614 or Lt. Governor-elect John Wayne Abernathy at 436-1391.

Girl Scouts hold member registration

By ANN LESTER
Special to The Virginia Beach Sun

The Girl Scout Council of Colonial Coast is holding information and registration meetings at schools, libraries and churches during September. Girls, ages 5 to 17 or in grades kindergarten through 12, can become Girl Scouts.

Through progressive experiences, Girl Scouting promotes cooperative learning, racial/ethnic pride and respect, and developing decision-making skills. Financial assistance is available.

Adults are needed to serve as leaders, trainers, consultants, planners, and managers - tailored to your time requirements. You don't have to have a daughter to participate.

For further information contact The Girl Scout Council of Colonial Coast, Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at 486-9737 or 1-800-775COUT.

Before long, however, boating season will end, leaving these feathered friends with little free food.

BUSINESS

Fiorillo named as bank's branch director at Beach

Thomas Fiorillo has been named branch director of the Associates Financial Services Company, Inc., office at 6517 Auburn Drive.

The company is the consumer finance subsidiary of Associates Corporation of North America, a financial services companies.

The Virginia Beach office provides lending programs for consumers, including home improvement financing, loans for education, automobiles and other financing needs. The company also works with retailers to finance purchases of home entertainment merchandise, furniture and major appliances.

"We are dedicated to meeting the financial needs of our customers," said Fiorillo. "I feel that with The Associates' wide variety of finance and insurance products, we can help almost anyone who walks through the door."

Fiorillo joined The Associates in 1987 as an assistant manager in the Elkhart, Ind. branch. A native of Battle Creek, Mich., he now resides in Virginia Beach.

Associates Corporation of North America provides consumer finance, specialized commercial finance and leasing, and insurance. Part of the Financial Services Group of Ford Motor Company, it has assets of more than $2 billion and manages financial assets of about $2.9 billion for Ford subsidiaries, the United Kingdom, Japan and Canada.

Bank spin-off in Virginia Beach approved by board

The board of Heritage Bankshares, Inc. (formerly Independent Banks of Virginia), recently formally approved the spin-off of its Princess Anne Bank and The Heritage Bank subsidiaries located, respectively, in Virginia Beach, and in McLean, Va.

Under the plan, Heritage Bankshare stockholders will receive one share of common stock in each of Princess Anne Bank and The Heritage Bank for each share they currently own of Heritage Bankshares. They will retain their Heritage Bankshares certificates. Bankshares will continue to own Norfolk-based Heritage Bank and Trust.

Hopkins pleads guilty to tax fraud charges in 1988

A Virginia Beach resident pled guilty recently in U.S. District Court to filing a false federal tax return with the Internal Revenue Service for the tax year 1988.

Gary S. Hopkins, an employee of B and D Electric, pled guilty to filing a false federal tax return which understated his gross income by $41,815 for 1988. Hopkins filed an amended return for 1988 on which he continued to underestimate his income by $27,176.

In addition to his employment with B and D Electric, Hopkins was also involved in the salvage and sale of used electronic equipment.

As part of the plea agreement, the government agreed not to prosecute Hopkins on related charges of filing a false federal tax return which understated his 1987 gross income by $43,398.

Hopkins faces a maximum sentence of three years in prison and a fine of $250,000. Judge Robert E. Payne set sentencing for Thursday, Nov. 5. Hopkins was released on a personal recognizance bond.

Williamsburg firm awarded $1.8 million Beach contract

The Commonwealth Transportation Board recently approved eight contracts valued at $4.5 million for highway and bridge construction and improvements in the Suffolk Transportation district. The board approved 66 contracts statewide valued at $32.7 million.

Henderson, Inc., of Williamsburg was awarded a $1.8 million contract to construct a traffic control center for the High Occupancy Vehicle (HOV) System in Norfolk and Virginia Beach. The center will be located near Interstate 64 in Virginia Beach at the intersection of Indian River Road and Reon Drive.

Langley and MacDonald was awarded a $194,000 contract for supplementary consultant services for Military Highway between the Virginia Beach city line and Interstate 264 in Norfolk. It will provide for right of way and construction plans for widening this 2.4 mile section of Military Highway from four to eight lanes.

DAV Forget-Me-Not Day set

Tidewater chapters of the Disabled American Veterans will solicit donations at Virginia Beach shopping centers and area military bases in support of disabled veterans Wednesday, Friday, Sept. 10, 11 and 12.

In return for voluntary donations, contributors will receive a small, blue Forget-Me-Not artificial flower.

The first time the DAV ever sold Forget-Me-Nots to the public was on February 24, 1926. This first fund drive was held to raise funds to support DAV services and assistance desperately needed by veterans disabled in World War I. The DAV was picking up on an idea which later became an international tradition now shared by veterans' groups in more than 50 countries.

This idea grew out of an image carried home from the First World War in the memories of soldiers who had seen spring flowers growing among the graves of fallen comrades killed in the fighting. To the survivors, symbolized the promise of new life following the sacrifices of so many.

By formal proclamation, Mayor Oberndorf has officially proclaimed Forget-Me-Not Days in Virginia Beach. Individual contributions are welcomed.

Make checks payable to DAV, P.O. Box 2041, Virginia Beach, Va. 23450. For more information call 481-5577.

The poem, "In Flanders

Mayor makes Forget-Me-Not Day proclamation to city

The following proclamation was recently issued at a Virginia Beach City Council meeting:

Whereas: Our community has a continuing sense of gratitude to those disabled veterans who did so much to preserve the American way of life;

Whereas: The Disabled American Veterans has worked exclusively for the welfare of disabled veterans;

Whereas: The Virginia Beach Chapter 20 of DAV has been established to carry on the work in our community;

Whereas: The DAV offers free service to disabled veterans and their families filing claims for government benefits and assists disabled veterans with medical, employment, and other problems;

Whereas: The DAV meets emergency situations which may arise in the family of a disabled veteran; and,

Whereas: The DAV has chosen August 30 through September 1, 1990, for its annual Forget-Me-Not campaign in the community and has announced that all funds collected will be used for disabled veterans in the community.

Now, therefore, I, Meyera E. Oberndorf, mayor of the city of Virginia Beach, Virginia, do hereby proclaim September 10 through 12 as Disabled American Veterans Forget-Me-Not Days in Virginia Beach, and urge the support of all citizens and organizations on this day.

DAV adopts memorial peace poem

The following poem was written in memorial for people wanting peace, and was adopted by the DAV:

In Flanders Fields

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.
We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now lie
In Flanders fields.
Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow

will be for his family to cope with his identity change.

"Dad is no longer a part of the community, but is in prison, and one of the hardest things for him is that he's no longer, 'Dr. So-and-So,' but 'Mr. So-and-So,'" said McCarthy.

She said that a question of his medical status will also be a concern.

Wayne Farrar, director of public information for the Virginia Department of Health Professions Administration, would not comment as to whether Loxley or another under investigation would explain the license board procedures.

Farrar said that the board of medical licenses, which is one of 12 boards, may receive complaints from individuals and patients, courts and other agencies, hospitals and similar news media.

As of 1991, there were 13,466 physicians licensed and residing in Virginia.

Approximately 3,000 complaints were received by the 12 boards, with 2,735 cases still open. From July 1, 1991 through June 30 of this year, the Board of Medicine closed 389 complaint cases. In 293 cases, it was determined that no violation occurred. Of the remaining, 81 were found in violation.

The board disciplined or sanctioned 63 cases; three licenses were revoked; none were suspended; 19 doctors were put on probation and 21 voluntarily surrendered their licenses.

On the average, said Farrar, cases take 15 to 21 months to be decided from the time a complaint is received to the date of decision.

Cases are first looked at for the board's jurisdiction. If public health and safety is an issue, that case is given priority.

"The Board of Medicine is empowered to take various actions for various violations," said Farrar.

These powers range from revoking or suspending a license to a fine or reprimand or, after consideration, they can do nothing, he said.

"There is a provision in the law if a person is convicted of a felony, and that wouldn't necessarily be related to his practice in any way... then the Board of Medicine must revoke or suspend the license," said Farrar.

In the case of a misdemeanor, whether or not it is related to the doctor's practice, the board is not required to revoke or suspend the doctor's license.

"But hypothetically speaking, to any doctor convicted of a misdemeanor, the board could take action," he said.

In any action the board takes in any case, however, the doctor can appeal to a court of law.

Farrar said that if a doctor is convicted of a misdemeanor in a court of law and found not guilty on his appeal, and the board was advised of it, the matter may be considered.

"Whether the board would take any action is unknown, because it would depend on the individual case," said Farrar. "The board can take any action, it depends on whether it came up."

McCarthy said that if Loxley is found not guilty in his appeal in Chesapeake Circuit Court, a number of scenarios could happen.

"I'd be looking at a support network of fellow doctors think, would be looking at acceptance."

McCarthy said the reaction from the Chesapeake community may be mixed.

"I would think we've got sort of a conservative community," he said. "It would depend on the church and the doctors..."

would be added as the demand increases.

Clyburn said that he could see a need for 10,000 students in a short time.

Once the project is started, Wilson said, it's easier to talk about what the demand is.

The location near TCC will make it a cost-efficient operation, Koch said. Students can go from one campus to another, share parking, a library, cafeteria and laboratories.

Koch said that the University of Virginia and Virginia Tech will be invited to participate, but that it would be difficult for them to send full-time faculty members because of the distance involved.

A friend of Donaldson's says that he is suffering from guilt over Kaplan's death because Kaplan was riding in the rear car while Donaldson was in the chauffeur armor-plated limousine of the prime minister. Word is that Donaldson may go back to Sarajevo because "he doesn't want David's death to be in vain."

"I wish I had never wanted to come do this story," a distraught Donaldson told friends. "David paid an awful price. David did the work and I got the credit. That's the way it is in this business. And the good people are also the ones to pay the price."

I agree with Donaldson on that statement and I feel that it would be a noble thing if he should decide to return to Sarajevo. However, I have a couple of suggestions to make.

Sam, leave your flak-jacket at home, it gets awfully hot in Sarajevo at this time of the year.

Sisisky seeks sixth term in Congress

A constitutional amendment key to lowering deficit

By M.J. RICHARDS
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

What does five-term Democratic Congressman Norman Sisisky hope to convince Virginia Beach voters before the November election?

"That I'm sincere and devoted to my job, and, hopefully, that I'm not tied to any of the (banking) problems in Washington," said fourth Congressional District Representative Sisisky, who stopped in for an interview at The Virginia Beach Sun office between campaign visits in Portsmouth and Chesapeake.

"I'm an independent voice. I don't always vote with my party. I don't always vote against the president," he said.

Congressman Norman Sisisky

Sisisky, 65, a Petersburg resident, will face Republican Party congressional candidate Toni Zedigols, an insurance agent from Hopewell, in the November election.

Sisisky, who has been actively campaigning since January, said his biggest concern for Virginia Beach residents are military issues.

"Everyone is concerned about the deficit. We need a constitutional amendment to balance the budget."

Congressman Norman Sisisky, on federal deficit

"From a military standpoint, they feel I can keep jobs going at the Newport News and Norfolk Naval shipyards... There is no area in the country, anywhere in the U.S. that is more affected by the military than Hampton Roads," said Sisisky, who owns a house at the Virginia Beach Oceanfront.

He said that he is counting on the military faction to secure his re-election.

Sisisky credits himself with getting funding for the Portsmouth Naval Hospital, which initially needed $350 million, but "by the time they finish it will be a $500 million hospital." He said this has an effect on local military retirees, particularly in Chesapeake. Sisisky said one of the major issues he plans to address is the deficit.

Football program offers alternative to school sports

By JULIE C. BROWN
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

In an age when children are surrounded by violence, whether on television or in their own backyard, there aren't many alternatives to hanging out and causing trouble.

But the Parks and Recreation Department of Virginia Beach does offer one alternative - a fall football program.

The department's league consists of 26 teams - divided up into two age groups, said Jay Smith, recreation program coordinator for the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation.

There is a 115-pound class, which has the Atlantic and Pacific Divisions, and the 135-pound class, which has 11 teams altogether, Smith said.

Although Smith couldn't give an exact number of boys who participate in the program, he said there are about 30 kids to each team.

One coach in the league is Carter Turpin, owner of Rudee's on the Inlet, and sponsor of the Cooke Redskins. The boys on the team are from Seatack, Linkhorn Park, Cooke and Bird-neck Elementary Schools, Turpin said.

Turpin's restaurant sponsors a junior varsity team, or "the little guys," as Turpin calls them, a 115-pound class team. He also coaches the team varsity team in 135 lb. class.

The city gives each team about $200 to $300 a season, which "doesn't really pay to dress a child," Turpin said. Altogether, Turpin said, it costs about $8,000 to $10,000 to sponsor an entire team.

Although it's time consuming, Turpin enjoys working with the boys and stays in touch with them even after the season is over to see how school is going.

In addition to sponsoring "the little guys," Rudee's and several co-sponsors like Pizza Hut, have a "big guys" team in 135-pound class. It cost more to sponsor a varsity team because the kids are bigger. For example, it cost $75 per helmet for the older boys, Turpin said.

Practices started in the middle of August with light workouts, Smith said. The practice schedule depends on the coach and team, he added. Turpin's team practices every afternoon from 6 to 9 p.m. behind Seatack Elementary School.

Although it's time-consuming, Turpin enjoys working with the boys and stays in touch with them even after the season is over to see how school is going, he said.

"These kids are a lot of fun," he said. "This program keeps them off the street, I wouldn't have done it had I not enjoyed it."

The department offers the program to give the boys something to do after school, that isn't as competitive as school sports, Smith said.

"We're kind of an alternative to school sports. We try not to cut and we're not as competitive," he said.

But Turpin will have to cut on the varsity team because there are 44 players and he should only have 33, he said.

"We've got a ton of kids," he said.

He attributed that to the fact that Lynnhaven and Virginia Beach Junior High Schools have delayed their football programs to January due to lack of staff, he said.

"That has benefitted me," Turpin said.

The season officially kicks off on Saturday, Sept. 12 at Princess Anne Park, where all the games are played, said Smith.

City negotiates to establish soccer tournaments, new revenues in area

14-field complex means $2 million investment plan

By LEE CAHILL
Virginia Beach Sun City Council Reporter

A private group is negotiating with the city to establish a soccer complex which would bring major tournaments - and related revenues - to the city.

Under the plan proposed by the Virginia Beach Soccer Joint Task Force, Inc., which is made up of local soccer groups, the city would furnish the land, as much as 60 acres, and the private group would do the rest.

This would include a $1.5 to $2 million investment to develop the 14-field complex, maintained by the private group and possibly jointly-developed facilities such as roads.

Although no specific site has been recommended by the task force, a 60-acre site in Princess Anne Park, operated by the city's Parks and Recreation Department, is being considered.

Developing the complex at that site, said Michael Barrett, president of the task force, 25 fields would be available - the 14 proposed fields, eight that are already located in the park and three more that will be located at the new elementary and middle schools.

If the city chooses to purchase a new site, the cost would come out of the park land acquisition fund.

The closest comparable complexes are Striker's Park in Richmond with eight fields, Greensborough, N.C., with 10 fields, and Raleigh, with 15 fields and Raleigh.

Barrett said that the task force, which is composed of the Beach FC Soccer Club, the Virginia Beach Soccer Club and the Atlantic Travel Soccer Club, is looking toward a fall 1994 opening date.

Since the task force wants a 20-year lease with two 10-year renewals on the property, state law requires that the city call for competitive bids on the lease. Anything over a five-year lease must be submitted for bids.

This would include a $1.5 to $2 million investment to develop the 14-field complex...

Barrett said that although the likelihood is that the city would renew the lease at the end of five years, the task force wants a longer lease to assure its private donors that the land will continue to be used as a soccer complex.

Barrett hopes that the lease will be approved this fall with funding between now and next season, when construction would start.

This would be the largest development of public park property by private community groups.

Princess Anne Plaza Little League, however, developed fields on 20 acres of park property under five-year renewable leases and the Virginia Beach Little League fields are currently being developed on 13 acres of Ocean Lakes Park through a five-year renewable lease.

Barrett said that the Columbus Day Soccer Tournament will attract 275 teams, of which 250 are from out of the area with 13,000 participants. The event is expected to generate $1.2 million in gross revenues and $32,000 in direct tax revenues.

The players come from Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and, this year, possibly teams from Canada and Nairobi.

The problem is that the teams now play on fields all over -- at Norfolk's Lake Taylor Academy, Cape Henry Collegiate School, as well as Princess Anne Park. Barrett said that more than 100 teams were turned away because of the lack of space. A 25-field complex, he said, would accommodate 500-team tournaments.

Parks and Recreation plans that the development of the 60 acres in the park, not funded in the Capital Budget, would cost the city $5 million, Susan D. Watson, Parks and Recreation director, said.

Conveyance of the property, valued at approximately $1.75 million, is contingent upon the General Assembly approval of funding for planning and/or construction and Board of Visitors authorization by Dec. 31, 2000.

According to the agreement between the city and the university, construction should commence by Dec. 31, 2000. However, the agreement notes that the timeline for the project may be amended by joint agreement of Old Dominion and the city of Virginia Beach.

A master site plan for the property will be prepared once state funding is secured. Architectural renderings displaying the proposed exteriors of buildings as well as site plans, building plans, sign plans and landscaping plans will be subject to approval by the city.

Richard A. Stanski, vice president for administration and finance, said the university and the city of Virginia Beach will establish a joint committee to oversee the progress of the project.

The new site could eventually be capable of serving as many as 6,000 students when the property is

The Virginia Beach City Council recently voted unanimously to approve the eventual transfer of 36 acres of land in Virginia Beach to Old Dominion University for the development of a regional higher education center. It represents the second-largest gift in the university's history.

Once a center is established, Old Dominion, along with Norfolk State University, will offer a wide range of upper-level and graduate courses at the site, which is located immediately south of Tidewater Community College on Princess Anne Road.

Community volunteers help kids

The Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation offers a full football program for boys as an alternative to school sports and more importantly - as an alternative to hanging around causing trouble.

Those involved in the program, like Carter Turpin, volunteer their time to helping kids and performing a community service to give the boys something to do.

If it weren't for several dedicated people, the program wouldn't exist and the boys would be taking their aggressions out on something other than a football field.

Those involved in the program don't have to do it, they do it because they want to, they want to put something back into the community. — J.C.B.

OUR PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

Our Pledge of Allegiance -
Oh, how beautiful are its words.
Created by a frame of letters
That are finer than the birds.
Its meaning is one nation,
With liberty and justice for all.
Americans come together
When hearing this proudest call.
It is our duty, honor and pride
To praise this striving land.
Only when we express it together,
Will it forever be able to stand.

However, we are in some trouble,
Because we're in certain doubt.
Many of us who have been saying it this long
Can't seem to figure it out.
After many years of saying it as one,
And finding our own true pride,
We can't seem to remember it word for word,
As our lips and hearts become all dried.
Where is this pride and liberty
Of which this Great America once spoke?
When many of its citizens only take it
And act as an irritating cloak.
However, it is never too late to learn
These honorable and dignifying lines.
So let's all join together
To learn this pledge which shines!

Stick to church, Pat - get out of politics

By JULIE C. BROWN
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

When I was a little girl, I remember flipping through the television channels and seeing Pat Robertson on the 700 Club. I was raised in a Catholic home and my parents always told me to keep right on changing the channels when I saw shows like the 700 Club. I was always under the impression that the 700 Club and the PTL Club were one in the same.

Snot-noses like McEnroe, Connors plague U.S. tennis

Every year, I vow that I will not watch the U.S. Open tennis matches and every year I always end up watching them.

I have always enjoyed tennis. In fact, I was once a ball boy when Billie Jean King and Fred Perry played exhibition series in my hometown.

I have become disillusioned because of the obscene conduct of probably two of the greatest players in recent history.

John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors are two snot-nose punks who have no respect for others. They obviously do not believe in fair play, and setting an example for people is not one of their agenda.

Both McEnroe and Connors continue to abuse the judges and line person, knowing full-well that they can't defend themselves. I have seen them spit at officials, make obscene gestures at both officials and spectators. I have heard them curse and rant and rave when they feel that they have received a bad call.

McEnroe never lets up. When he loses a point he blames the judges, the ball person, the spectators, condition of the court and never believes that it was his fault. Both are bullies not only on the tennis court, but in other areas of their lives also.

bouncing off Robertson's tongue. His mission is no longer to convert the pagan masses, who happen to be plugged into the tube. He wants to stir up an angry response wherever and whenever he can.

And that's when I started to pay attention to what was coming from his mouth. I didn't like what I was hearing, either.

In 1988, when Robertson sought the Republican presidential nomination, I was a senior in high school. I wasn't aware of all the ins and outs of politics, but it frightened me to think that an evangelist could someday run our country.

But even more frightening is what's going on now - people actually pay attention to the narrow-minded and uncompromising

McEnroe picks on airline representatives (especially airplane). What he needs is for someone to wipe that snot off his face with a fist. Sadly, the blame is not entirely McEnroe's and Connors, but rather the spines of U.S. open officials who put up with those two spoiled brats because of greed.

Tennis officials should have the same authority that baseball umpires have: kick their butts out if they become abusive. But I'm afraid that will never happen as long as U.S. Open officials continue to coddle brutes like McEnroe and Connors, and tennis will be the worse for it.

But one thing is for sure. In time those two shall pass (no pun intended).

They are just about finished and the sooner the better.

Welcome to the real world.

Football fans find the new meaning of life

By M.J. RICHARDS
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

It's that time of the year again. Sunday afternoons and some Monday nights have once again become the meaning of life for many Virginia Beach residents - especially men. Football season has arrived.

For those who prefer to go shopping, take naps or carry on with everyday life, football season can be a nightmare.

Sundays become the day when fathers and sons become hopelessly glued to the television, and for the females in the household - they better forget about engaging in any intellectual conversation for the next 17 Sundays. (That is unless, of course, they too become glued to the television to watch a few glorious hours of quarterback-sacking, interceptions, fumbles and touchdowns.)

A true football fan's life is run by the success of a bunch of men in padded armor chasing an egg-shaped pigskin over white lines on a manicured but muddy field.

For most Virginia Beach families, this behavior is expected.

Sunday becomes a holy day, but not necessarily for church. Forget about having the lawn mowed, car fixed, the sink repaired, grocery shopping done, taking the kids to the park, walking the dog, eating a civilized meal together or having the bills paid on a Sunday.

And if the favored team loses, forget about having a cheerful face in the house for the rest of the day.

Let's face it. A true football fan's life is run by the success of a bunch of men in padded armor chasing an egg-shaped pigskin over white lines on a manicured but muddy field, who enjoy bashing the hell out of each other to prove their manliness.

A true football fan's family must know their place, and understand that the football-lover doesn't care about them any less, but that nothing is as important as the game," until it is over.

If you take away their football, you take away the meaning of life.

Just hang in there for about 16 more weeks, and hope your football fan's team doesn't make it to the play-offs.

Or, you can join your fan on the couch.

Being prepared in case of hurricane

The topic I would like to discuss is hurricane preparedness. This topic is timely in that we are currently in the middle of the hurricane season. It is also timely in that we are having the opportunity to see and read about how others are coping with the impact of a hurricane as Florida and Louisiana begin the recovery from Hurricane Andrew.

Local government and the state acknowledge this threat and prepare plans to deal with the potential consequences of a hurricane. Before, during and after a disaster, the individual has an extremely important role with regard to insuring their own safety.

The moral is that hurricanes are something we will eventually have to face if we choose to live in this community over a number of years and we should be prepared for their occurrence.

Local government and the state acknowledge this threat and prepare plans to deal with the potential consequences of a hurricane. Before, during and after a disaster, the individual has an extremely important role with regard to insuring their own safety.

and survivability in the event of a hurricane.

Local government will provide advice, information, warnings and sheltering. You must use this information and react in a reasonable and responsible manner to insure your safety, minimize inconveniences and speed the return to normal after a hurricane. To insure that you are prepared for a hurricane, consider the following as they relate to individual and family comprehensive hurricane emergency preparedness.

Preparedness begins with planning before the threat of an emergency exists. Before an emergency is the time to consider the following. You need to learn the flooding history of the community. Determine if you need to evacuate from your home. Identify locations and routes to evacuate to, or learn those buildings used as shelters in the community.

Evaluate the need for flood insurance. Remember, home owner insurance does not cover tidal flooding. Collect materials and and concerns were raised from that event. Andrew will once again raise that concern between both local government and the community. Let's hope that this attention can raise the consciousness of everyone.

Virginia Beach, as a coastal community, must acknowledge the potential risks of tidal flooding associated with hurricanes and winter storms. Hurricanes are, by nature, infrequent events. We have to look back to the 1930s where we experienced our last major hurricane, one greater than a category three storm and we have to look to the early 1960s to find a storm that actually struck Virginia Beach.

Using historical records, the mean return for a major storm is 50 years and the mean return for any hurricane is seven years. Based upon this, we are long overdue for a hurricane, and our history would seem to indicate that these events tend to occur with some regularity over time.

Finding a way to measure customers' satisfaction

"The Beach is back." Those of us who were at the convocation heard Virginia Beach city schools Superintendent Sidney Fauchette speak about restoring the Virginia Beach school system to its former, solid status.

He said that in his first year here he listened and learned and now it was time to lead. Much of this listening led to a plan to restructure the way we do business in Virginia Beach.

Fauchette, as well as many notable business and educational consultants, believes that "customer service" is the key to success in any business, particularly a human service business. Our customers are our students and their parents. The school system is trying to find ways to measure customer satisfaction. Increased customer involvement and feedback will play an important role.

Every school will intensify its efforts to communicate with parents through school planning councils and evaluate surveys.

Teachers will assess the leadership capabilities of principals through confidential surveys beginning this year.

300 to 500 teachers will be field-testing a client survey with their students' parents this year.

A committee of 30 teachers selected by Fauchette, the Client Evaluation Task Force, met intensively with Dr. Donald Ball, a professor from the University of Virginia, over the summer. Their mission was to design an instrument to measure parent perceptions of teacher performance. The reasoning was two-fold; the survey results could help become more responsive to the needs of their

NAS Oceana show features flying acts

NAS Oceana's annual air show will be held on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 12 and 13 at the Master Jet Base.

The two-day celebration will feature flying acts by civilian performers and an array of military flying demonstrations, to include the Canadian Snowbirds Flight Demonstration Team.

The public is invited to attend the shows. Admission is free. Gates to the station will be open starting at 9 a.m.

Flying demonstrations and activities will start at 10 a.m., running continuously until 4 p.m. "Variety" is the theme for the 1992 shows. Flying acts range from aerobatic teams to wing walkers.

A Peterbilt Truck powered by three jet engines with afterburners will race a plane down the Oceana runway at nearly 300 mph, and U.S. Navy Seal Team parachutists from the Little Creek Naval Amphibious Base will delight spectators with exciting free-fall performances, landing feet first on a small marker in front of the audience bleachers.

Military flight demonstrations will be performed by combat aircraft from Desert Storm including F-14A Plus Tomcat, F/A-18 Hornet, A-6 Intruder, A-10 Warthog and the AH-64 Apache Helicopter.

Americans take political class of ABC's

Virginia's public schools had a tardy start because the General Assembly decreed in 1986 that schools not begin their fall session until after Labor Day, which was last this year.

Yesterday, our city's schools opened their doors to 74,260 pupils. Some will soon be learning their ABC's, and others will learn how to find the right answer to math problems and to questions in their courses. All students will learn lessons that will benefit them the rest of their lives.

We the voters with the campaign education process had been tardy in starting. We have been in a school of sorts during most of this political year, and some of us are a bit tired of the endless lectures we've been receiving. Long for the old days when politicians waited until after Labor Day to begin their self-serving tutoring of the electorate?

No such luck. The '92 political school opened early, almost a year ago, and seems to run from early most to late night. We potential voters have no options or electives. There is no end to the campaign issues and non-issues that have been raised and re-raised. They have covered the alphabet, giving new meaning to the ABC's we learned as children.

The lectures in politics '92 have been presented on television with occasional sound bites from the winning or losing this war? E: Economy in long-term crisis. Education still "at risk"? Environment - are we too late to save our planet?

F: Family values or moral assaults? Foreign affairs, an affair is something done or dealt with. G: God omitted from Democratic platform but praised from Republican platform. H: Health care reform sought by Senior Citizens; Hollywood, TV and record industries accused of promoting immorality; More homelessness following Hurricane Andrew. Incomes, no longer keep up with inflation, are going down or gone; Iran-Contra still dog Bush. J: Jobs lost, training needed, high unemployment continues.

K: KKK and David Duke not welcome under the Republican tent, nor are gays. L: Leadership - who has it and who hasn't? Legal reform called for by one party, which accuses the other of receiving funds from the trial lawyers. M: Media, a.k.a. the "Liberation Press." N: National security about which little has been said. O: Opinion makers and takers, have data-interpretive skills of the poll-takers conditioned politicians to follow, not lead, the country? P: Polls - can we believe them? Bounces may show voter indecision or the questions may be loaded.

Q: Quotas a hot issue last spring, not heard of since. R: Race relations - no longer on front burner. Yet, impact domestic issues from education to economy. S: Social Security - safe or insecure? T: Taxes - lowered or raised? Bush suggested a check-box plan; Clinton will tax the rich and give relief to the middle class. U: Urban decline has four symptoms: crime, drugs, homelessness and unemployment. Can cities be revitalized?

V: Vision - The Vision thing is a vision gap. Voters want a president to articulate a vision for America, and explain why he wants the job and is capable of filling it. W: Welfare reform needed. X: Xenophobia must be overcome, we will fail to remain E Pluribus Unum. Y: You the voter - wanted by both parties. Z: Zoo - what this whole political charade is turning into.

supplies, flashlights, batteries, transistor radios, manual can openers and building supplies that you might need to protect your home.

Also, if you think you will be going to a shelter, you will need to make arrangements for your pets. Red Cross rules prohibits animals in public shelters.

The next level of preparedness is that of increased readiness. When a storm starts to potentially threaten Virginia Beach, you need to consider the following: news and weather broadcasts should be regularly monitored to learn of forecast weather conditions, but also to learn the actions and recommendations of local government. During this time you may want to stock up on supplies, materials and food to ride out the storm and to survive through a period of recovery. Fuel for the car and medication supplies are the types of items that should be checked.

Remember, they may not be available to you for some time after a storm. You also may wish to take actions to protect and prepare your property, such as bringing in lawn furniture and protecting windows to minimize property damage.

The next phase of preparedness is your response to an emergency. This would include evacuations and sheltering if necessary. If you are threatened by tidal and wave actions or live in a mobile home, you will want to evacuate. Plan to evacuate in good weather before the arrival of tropical force winds.

If you plan to leave the region, do so early. It will take up to 27 hours to complete an evacuation out of the region for those who wish to leave a major hurricane.

If you intend to go to a shelter, watch for opening announcements and remember our shelters exist primarily to provide protection from the storm. You should bring bedding, extra food and supplies to support your stay in the shelters.

As the actual storm conditions arrive, do not go outside; be prepared to go to a well-protected room in your home, use the telephone only in an emergency.

The last phase of preparedness is recovery. A hurricane may just cause power outages, downed trees and other wind damage. A major hurricane has the potential for catastrophic consequences that are difficult to visualize.

A category four hurricane will create damage 240 times the damage of a category one hurricane. In such an event, expect all services and utilities to be out of service, from sewer to telephone. These conditions could last for a number of days to weeks, depending upon your location. You must be prepared to survive in this primitive, serviceless and informationless environment.

Local governments will be in the same condition as you. Insure that you understand these potential consequences and plan accordingly.

In the aftermath, many dangers exist from fire, electrocution, animal bites and food poisoning, all related to the environment in which you will find yourself. Recovery will be a slow and methodic process. Things may never be the same after a hurricane.

The preceding represents some reasonable levels of individual and family preparedness that should be understood and practiced within our community.

The city will seek to be prepared to respond to the challenge of a hurricane. Remember, you also have a responsibility. Your survival, safety and recovery from such an event will depend upon your preparedness.

do so, mainly funded through tourism taxes.

"The idea of building quality attractions and quality facilities and identifying tracts of land where these types of facilities and golf courses can be built - I think it's exciting," said Ricketts.

He said the city is coming forth with plans to build more quality golf courses, which will help attract more off-season tourists to the city.

Lawton said that while Myrtle Beach, S.C. appears to be a golf course attraction, many people would prefer "not to drive eight hours down the coast to get to it."

The weather's beautiful, and we've got ample room to provide these facilities."

Ricketts said that because two-thirds of the city is not developed, there is much room for attractions to bring in visitors. He also said that 3,000 acres on Princess Anne Road near Sandbridge have been set aside for golf courses, bicycling and picnic areas, lakes, self-contained resorts and some residential development.

"I think the point of all of this is now really starting to break through, and tourism is a top priority for the revenue and the city government," said Ricketts.

fully developed - almost triple the number currently served in the Old Dominion-Norfolk State Virginia Beach center. Currently there are no plans to close the center on Virginia Beach Boulevard.

In the spring 1992 academic semester, Old Dominion offered 173 course sections and Norfolk State offered 43 sections at the Virginia Beach site. The two universities together enrolled more than 2,000 students. The center has been open three years and has posted double-digit enrollment growth rates every semester.

The two universities plan to offer a broadened range of coursework at the new Princess Anne site, including upper-level undergraduate coursework that will enable students to complete a bachelor's degree on "plus 2" basis. Tidewater Community College will provide the first two years of instruction and Old Dominion and Norfolk State will provide the second two years.

The proposed center is especially well-located in terms of its potential to promote cooperation between TCC and Old Dominion and Norfolk State, Koch said.

The institutions will be able to share physical facilities such as parking and cafeterias, and some academic facilities such as laboratories and libraries.

Other higher education institutions also will be invited to participate in the center to the extent that they do not duplicate the courses and programs offered by TCC, Old Dominion and Norfolk State.

Koch and Norfolk State President Harrison B. Wilson said the main location of the two universities will continue to be in the city of Norfolk.

"Old Dominion's Hampton Boulevard location in Norfolk will continue to be our only residential site for our 17,000 students, and the university's large research establishment will continue to be located in Norfolk," Koch said. "We do not intend to move out of the city of Norfolk. It is simply a further development of the model that we have developed to serve placebound, commuter student sites in such as Hampton, Portsmouth and Virginia Beach."

"Indeed, we are currently in the midst of very productive conversations and city of Norfolk authorities about expanding our residential student housing and research facilities on and around Hampton Boulevard."

This information was provided by Old Dominion University.

clients and could serve as an improvement tool.

The task force has spent many hours systematically drafting this instrument that will continue to undergo revision. It was their intention that teachers maintain ownership of the survey with annual review and modification as necessary. The survey was designed by teachers as an instrument of self-improvement for teachers to incorporate change into the learning environment. That notion of change is exactly what is alarming to some of our colleagues. Despite Fauchette's declaration of a fear "funeral," a number of teachers and principals feel the lingering vestiges of a bureaucracy that was not grounded in trust and empowerment.

The goal of public schools in Virginia Beach is to continue moving toward becoming true human service organizations; yet, it's clear that some teachers would feel more comfortable if the transition was incremental. A complete evaluation of the program next summer, based upon field-testing this year, is intended to relieve these anxieties and allow improvements to the final instrument before it is available to all teachers.

Fauchette and VBEA both believe that the notion of client surveys deserves a great deal of study and professional debate. At the meeting of teachers interested in client surveys, Fauchette demonstrated his sensitivity to this fact and pledged that the purpose of the survey was to help teachers and improve instruction - not put fear into the organization.

The upcoming Partners in Learning Conference will include an informational session on client surveys and an opportunity for members to talk with hard working teachers who have helped create the instrument and system.

We all want better schools for our children; it's just that we disagree sometimes on how to achieve this academic excellence. One universal component however is partnerships. Neither schools nor parents can do the job of educating a child alone. The search for a means to determine "customer satisfaction" may result in more successful schools.

Sisisky seeks re-election

"You don't see it, you don't feel it, but the services are going down. Grants to facilities are decreasing," he said.

Sisisky said he would like to see WIC and head-start programs placed on the conservatives' agenda, and fully supports attention to these educational programs for families.

Sisisky said that he does not agree with Democratic Party presidential candidate Bill Clinton's economic plan 100 percent.

"At least Mr. Bush said he'd let us see (his plan) after the election," Sisisky said.

Aside from the issue of the deficit, Sisisky is also concerned about keeping his congressional seat for at least one more term.

He said he plans to advertise through television commercials, but will probably not engage in negative advertisements toward his opponent.

He added that he does not know enough about his opponent to comment on him.

Sisisky said that he thinks he will win over Virginia Beach voters, and will win the election in the Hampton Roads area, to serve a sixth term.

"I'm in a peculiar situation that I'm not doing it for a living," said Sisisky. "I got mine before I got there. Unlike most people, I do this as a civic service. It's not my seat, it's the people's seat."

The Fourth Congressional district stretches from the Centerville District of Virginia Beach through half of Chesapeake, encompassing all of Portsmouth and continuing toward the western part of the state toward Charlottesville.

Green fires shots in Gracetown

Police responded to a domestic situation on Wednesday, Sept. 2 at approximately 2:32 p.m. in the 1500 block of Eagleton Lane, in the Gracetown section of the city. It was reported that an individual identified as Claudius Bubba Green, 33, of the 1500 block of Eagleton Lane, was in his mother's home destroying property with a knife.

When officers arrived on the scene, Green fired a shot gun out the front door, hitting a house across the street. Officers surrounded the house and detained traffic off Independence Boulevard, between Cullen Road and Lake Shore Road. The house which Green barricaded himself in, backed up to Independence Boulevard.

Green discharged the shotgun again, this time out the back of the house. It appeared approximately four shots were fired this time.

The department's S.W.A.T. team and hostage negotiation team were deployed in an effort to get Green to come out of the house peacefully.

Negotiations began with Green by telephone and continued throughout the afternoon, evening and into the early morning hours. Green became more defiant and uncooperative and several times indicated he would come out of the house, which he did not do.

Beach Crime Report

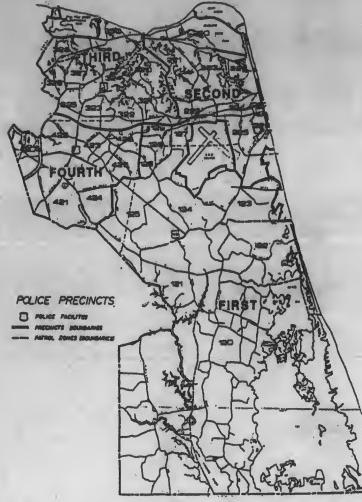

At approximately 1:15 a.m., Green indicated he was going to harm himself or possibly take his own life. He then put the telephone down and would no longer communicate with police negotiators. Police negotiators then heard a shot fired from a weapon over the phone. Officers outside the home also reported hearing a shot fired.

Green did not return to the telephone nor did he respond to additional attempts to be recontacted by negotiators by using a bull horn outside his home.

Being concerned about his well-being and potential injury he may have inflicted upon himself, officers attempted to gain entry to the house by deploying two distraction devices or light sound devices into the living room (the light sound device gives off a high intensity light as well as an extremely loud sound). One of the devices landed next to the individual's shotgun.

It appeared Green was reaching for the shotgun when the device activated. As a result, Green received minor burns to his left hand and neck/face area. He was transported by rescue to Sentara Norfolk General Hospital, where he is listed in stable condition.

A warrant has been issued for Green's arrest for shooting into an occupied dwelling, which is a felony. The warrant was expected to be served after Green recovers from his injuries.

The entire incident lasted approximately 11 hours, and involved approximately 40 police officers. Traffic was re-opened along Independence Boulevard at 2 a.m.

The investigation is continuing by Third Precinct Detective W.L. Mosley.

16-year-old girl jogger raped

Virginia Beach police are investigating the rape of a 16-year-old Virginia Beach girl. The rape occurred on Tuesday, August 25 at about 5:45 a.m. as the victim was jogging in the 2000 block of Wolfsnare Road. As the victim was jogging the suspect came up to her from behind, pushed her into bushes, raped and sodomized her. The victim was treated and released at Virginia Beach General Hospital.

The suspect is described as a black male, 5'7" tall, 150 pounds with a small but muscular build. At the time of the attack the suspect was wearing white shorts, white shirt which may have had "Marlboro" written on it, a ball cap (possibly red), dark tennis shoes and white socks.

This case is being investigated by Detective D.S. Ford of the department's Sex Crimes Unit. Anyone with information is asked to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Callers may remain anonymous and could be eligible for up to a $1,000 reward for information leading to an arrest.

Three Norfolk men are arrested

Three Norfolk men have been arrested in connection with the recently smash-and-grab burglary of a business.

Sound Around, located at the Providence Square Shopping Center in the 1000 block of Kempsville Road, was broken into on August 18, at approximately 2:50 a.m.

The suspects broke into the front of the store by throwing a cinder block through the store window, removing various stereo equipment and fleeing the area in a vehicle.

While officers were responding to the call, one of the officers, Officer J.B. Jensen of the Fourth Precinct stopped a possible suspect vehicle involved in the burglary. Jensen ascertained the drivers identity and this information was turned over to the Fourth Precinct's detectives.

Detective A.C. Simpkins and other Fourth Precinct detectives were able to further develop leads which lead to the apprehension and arrest of three individuals in connection with this crime.

The following individuals have been each charged with burglary and grand larceny and are being held in the Virginia Beach City Jail:

Lester Campbell, 19, of 1800 block of Meadowlark Drive in Norfolk. He is being held on a $7,000 surety bond.

Charles Pipkin, 19, of the 6200 block of Ball Avenue in Norfolk. He is being held on a $10,000 surety bond.

Terry Poff, 20, of the 4800 block of Larkin Street in Norfolk. He is being held on a $25,000 surety bond.

Crime Solvers seeking fugitives

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers paid out $5,560 in cash rewards last month. Several of the rewards were paid for the location of wanted persons.

The following people are wanted and featured in the Hampton Roads Crime Line wanted fugitives flyer:

Jeffrey Jones, Hubert Hendricks, Richard Barton, Jeannine Kerner, Leila Davis, Kendrick Jones, Derrick Walker and Terry Winnings.

A free copy of the wanted flyer is available at all Hampton Roads 7-Eleven Stores. It has pictures of wanted people in all the Hampton Roads Cities, and if you know where police can find one of these pictured call Crime Solvers at 427-0000.

Helping Older Americans See Their Future

People rely on their vision more than any other sense to live actively and independently. Because vision loss can have a major impact on a person's lifestyle, it is important to make older adults aware of the eye conditions and diseases they are at risk of developing, and the need for annual eye exams.

Any change in or loss of vision is a cause for concern and for visiting an eye care specialist. An eye exam can determine if these changes are symptoms of a serious disorder. Some conditions require only minor medical treatment.

Many older people find it harder to focus on objects that are nearby - a condition known as "presbyopia." Usually, presbyopia is corrected with prescription bifocal glasses or contact lenses. Sometimes older eyes make too many or too few tears - conditions referred to as "watery eye" or "dry eye." In most instances, special eye drops can be prescribed to alleviate these problems.

Aside from these conditions, there are four major eye diseases - cataracts, glaucoma, diabetic retinopathy and macular degeneration - that people over 65 are at special risk of developing. These diseases can result in a major loss of vision and independence if not treated promptly and properly. Older people need to know that the best way to protect and maintain their good vision is through eye exams that result in the early detection of these problems.

Cataracts are the leading cause of vision loss among older people - as easily as the most easily treated. Cataracts occur when the eye's clear lens becomes cloudy (much as a camera lens may fog up). The clouding of the lens causes a grad-is surgery, during which the natural lens of the eye is removed and replaced with an artificial one. Cataract surgery is the most commonly performed operation. Typically, surgery is considered when the cataract is interfering with vision to a degree that impairs an individual's independent lifestyle. A person might delay or avoid treatment because of the fear of a lengthy recovery period and the dependency on family members.

Recent technological advances, however, allow cataract surgery to be performed in most cases on an outpatient basis, with patients potentially able to return to normal activities with good vision within days.

People who have glaucoma lose their vision gradually - first side or peripheral vision, then gradually total sight. People who have glaucoma often experience no symptoms. Early detection is critical because irreversible vision damage can occur as glaucoma advances. Eye care specialists can easily detect glaucoma. In most cases, glaucoma can be controlled or its progression slowed with special eye drops. In other cases, patients may need to take drugs orally or have surgery. Compliance with medication regimens is critical for treating glaucoma. Some older adults are at even higher risk than others for this disease, including blacks and people on steroid medication, such as cortisone. People with diabetes or eye injuries or who have a history of the disease in their family are also at special risk.

People who have diabetes are also at a high risk of developing diabetic retinopathy, a disease that significantly blurs people's vision and can cause major vision loss. The treatments for this disease primarily include lasers and are effective only when the disease is detected early. Many people with diabetic retinopathy must use low-vision aids and services to make the most of the vision they retain.

The disease called macular degeneration causes people to lose their central vision. There are treatments which can be effective in many instances, but they also must be undertaken when the disease first starts. People who lose vision due to macular degeneration must often rely on low-vision aids and services to maintain their lifestyles.

It's important that health care professionals make older people aware of these diseases, their treatment and prevention. Eye exams usually cost between $40 and $80 a visit (depending upon location). Annual eye exams are very important, since a person with an eye disorder may experience few or no symptoms and vision loss may be too gradual to notice.

Martinez participates in Nijmegen International Four Day Marches

By B. JOHN SMITH

Special Report

Before the sun could rise above the Netherlands' horizon, soldiers started to march out of their camp equipped with 22-pound backpacks and a goal to march 25 miles a day for four days, just as they can do it.

Army Spc. Lawrence L. Martinez, 21, son of Lawrence B. and Frances A. Martinez, Gassett Court, Virginia Beach, was one of more than 800 U.S. service members who participated in the 76th Nijmegen International Four Day Marches held July 21 through 24.

Marching 100 miles in four days is a difficult task, but with overwhelming support from the Dutch people, the pleasure of making international friends and proper medical treatment for punished feet, the groundpounders' march through the streets and countryside of the Netherlands is a little easier.

Even with extensive support, after the second 25-mile day Martinez found that Nijmegen was a different experience.

"So far the march has been very challenging and tough, but also fun. The thing I think is special about Nijmegen is that many people from many countries, soldiers and civilians alike, can get through the language and customs barriers and enjoy the march together," said the 1988 graduate of Greer Rn High School.

For the Dutch people, the marches are more than walking 100 miles in four days. It's a demonstration of willpower and there is much admiration for those who take the challenge. People line the sides of the roads as early as 4 a.m. to cheer and encourage the marchers during their hike.

Because of an allied victory call Operation Market Garden, the U.S. forces are well received. During World War II, U.S., British and Canadian paratroopers won decisive battles with the Germans in the area where the march is held.

Although there were almost 8,000 service members from 14 countries, Nijmegen was not a military event. This year there were over 30,000 civilian marchers.

In 1908, the Dutch people began participating in such long distance marches and since 1928 the marches have been open to international participation. One marcher described Nijmegen as being like the United Nations, where the many nations come to march, have fun and make new friends.

These international friendships often generate in the center of the militia, camp, Camp Heumensoord, where there were several food vendors and the festival tent which served refreshments. At night this tent became an international party of uniforms that often turned into a flag-waving sing-along.

Heumensoord was also the support center for the marchers. It supplied them with breakfast and dinner (lunch was eaten on the move), sleeping and shower areas, and the much needed medical aid stations.

Along each day's route, there are three mandatory aid stations and four U.S. stations within Camp Heumensoord.

Visiting the aid stations is not always a pleasant experience and because of the medics method of treatment, they earned nicknames like the meat grinders, butchers and physicians. The calling for the medics was mostly for blisters treatment. The marchers' blisters are drained and numbed, then Benzoine, which acts like a glue, is injected between the two separated skin layers and the foot is covered with cotton-coated Benzoine to give it an extra layer of skin. Although treatment is painful, it's a necessity so the marchers may continue to punish their feet the following day.

But for the pain the marchers put themselves through, they will gain everlasting memories of new friends who marched with them and of the people who supported their efforts.

"The Nijmegen memories that I will tell family and friends about are the sore feet and the thousands of civilians lining the streets, cheering us on," said Martinez, who is an electronic warfare intelligence specialist stationed in Wurzburg, Germany.

USS Arthur W. Radford wins coveted NEY award

What does it take to win the Captain Edward F. Ney Award for Excellence in Food Service? Exceptional mess specialists, command support, a lot of hard work and preparation, dedicated food service attendants, or all of the above?

Though any one of the above answers would be partially correct, "all of the above" is the best answer. All of these elements combined to help the USS Arthur W. Radford (DD 968) win the coveted Ney Award.

The long road to winning the NEY begins with the dedicated team of mess specialists on board. Day in and day out, they work from 4:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., to provide the crew with the best tasting, most nutritious, low-cholesterol and low-fat meals possible which is certainly not an easy chore. Yet, under the direction of Senior Chief Thomas S. Shukas and Chief Ronald A. Woodall, the men of the Norfolk-based destroyer make it happen and they make it good. Whether it's the 23-item salad bar, the Mediterranean-style chicken, Mexican Night, shark filets, or just plain ole' "sliders," a team sailors affectionately use for hamburgers, the culinary skills of "galley watch captains" Petty Officers David Davis and Daryl Scarborough shine through. The pride put into each delectable delight is evident at every meal.

The ship's commanding officer, Cmdr. James E. Pledger, has been extremely supportive and very involved in the transformation of the dining facility on board Radford. One of his primary objectives was to provide low cholesterol, low fat alternatives at every meal.

A complete and thorough menu was rewritten and carefully scrutinized. Once this was achieved, Cmdr. Pledger "turned his sights" on a material and equipment facelift for the galley and mess decks.

During the past year, every piece of galley and mess decks equipment has been replaced or upgraded without using a single dollar of the ship's operational budget by using surplus equipment and materials. Other improvements have included a new deck, some hanging plants, pictures and a fresh coat of paint.

Arthur W. Radford's road to the NEY award began with its annual Supply Management Inspection, conducted in August 1991 when the Food Service Division earned grades of "Outstanding" in all areas. The ship next was nominated by Commander Destroyer Squadron

Ten to represent the squadron in competition against all ships assigned to Commander Cruiser Destroyer Group Eight. An evaluation by the Norfolk Readiness Support Group Supply Department sent Arthur W. Radford into the semi-finals.

While on deployment in the Persian Gulf in support of Operation Desert Storm, members of the Navy Food Management Team, based in San Diego, Calif., conducted an intensive two-day evaluation.

At this point, only the final inspection by representatives from the Navy Food Service Office in Washington, D.C., and a representative of the International Food Service Executives Association (IFSEA) stood in the ship's way. On May 12, 1992, this review was conducted and all the "Radfordmen" performed superbly. Petty Officer Davis was recognized for his excellent customer service attitude and was awarded a Certificate of Appreciation by IFSEA.

The long road to the NEY is a challenging and rewarding experience and Lt. John F. Lynn, the ship's supply officer, successfully led the Supply Department down this road.

This year-long cycle, however, also involved "Radfordmen" from the mechanics, electrical and repair divisions, and numerous crewmembers as food service attendants.

After learning that USS Arthur W. Radford was a winner, Seaman Kendall McNeely was asked what he was going to do, to represent the Radford at the awards ceremony, he replied, "and then maybe on to Disney World."

Familiar Faces plays at VWC

Virginia Wesleyan College begins its sixth season of "Familiar Faces" concerts on Saturday, Sept. 12 at 8 p.m. with a performance by baritone Frank Ward with pianist Charles Woodward in the college's Edward D. Hofheimer Theater.

Ward is an active performer in recitals, oratorios and opera. He holds a bachelor's degree from Morehouse College and master's and doctorate degrees from the University of Michigan. Leading operatic roles include those in La Serva Padrona, The Mikado, The Medium, and The Marriage of Figaro.

Dr. Ward has performed in oratorios by Faure, Handel, Bach, Haydn and Brahms. He is presently on the music faculty at Old Dominion University and is an active performer with many Hampton Roads music organizations.

The program will include Handel's "See the raging flames" from Joshua; Mozart's "Madamina! il catalogo e questo" from Don Giovanni; art songs by Faure, Schubert, Richard Hundley and Margaret Bonds; and spirituals arranged by Wendell Whalum and Hall Johnson.

Tickets are available at the door for $5. A season ticket book of six tickets can be purchased for $25.

Other performers in this year's series include oboist Phillip Koch with pianist Lee Jordan-Anders, soprano Renée Caulfield-Monti with pianist Charles Woodward, flute Laura Baesky with pianist Lee Jordan-Anders and guitarist Sam Dorsay, percussionist Robert W. Cross and harpsichordist Jennifer S. Paul. Call 455-3200 for additional information.

Zente to play at Wesleyan

Virginia Minstrel Bob Zentz, founder of Ramblin' Conrad's Guitar Shop, the Old Dominion Folk Festival and Tidewater Friends of Folk Music, will present a concert on Thursday, Sept. 12 at 11 a.m. at Virginia Wesleyan College. The concert, originally scheduled for the Science Auditorium, has been moved to the Edith D. Hofheimer Theater. For additional information call 455-3200.

Zentz, a Norfolk native, has been a songwriter, performer and teacher for all of his professional life. "I'm a presenter of folk songs, not a 'preserver' of them." He also talks a lot about the communion that takes place between the audience and himself, in which "...the listener becomes the receptor of the song," he said.

The hour-long program will include handmade and homemade traditional and contemporary songs, played on a wide variety of instruments.

Lynnhaven AARP hosts Brainard

The Virginia Beach Planning Commission will hold a public hearing on Wednesday, September 9, 1992 at 12:00 Noon in the Council Chambers of the City Hall Building, Princess Anne Court House, Virginia Beach, Virginia. A brief session will be held at 9:00 a.m. in the City Manager's Conference Room, City Hall Building. PLANNING COMMISSION ACTION IS NOT A FINAL DETERMINATION OF THE APPLICATION, BUT ONLY A RECOMMENDATION TO THE CITY COUNCIL AS THE VIEWPOINT OF THE PLANNING COMMISSION. FINAL DETERMINATION OF THE APPLICATION TO BE MADE BY CITY COUNCIL AT A LATER DATE, AFTER PUBLIC NOTICE IN A NEWSPAPER HAVING GENERAL CIRCULATION WITHIN THE CITY.

THESE MEMBERS OF THE PUBLIC INTERESTED IN ATTENDING THE PUBLIC HEARING SHOULD BE ADVISED THAT, FOR REASONS THE PLANNING COMMISSION DEEMS APPROPRIATE, CERTAIN ITEMS ON THE AGENDA MAY BE HEARD OUT OF ORDER AND THAT IT SHOULD NOT BE ASSUMED THAT THE ORDER LISTED BELOW WILL BE EXACTLY FOLLOWED DURING THE PUBLIC HEARING.

The staff reviews of some of all the items on this agenda suggest that certain conditions be attached to approval by City Council. However, it should not be assumed that those conditions constitute all the conditions that will ultimately be attached to the project. Staff agencies may impose further conditions and requirements during administration of applicable city ordinances.

Labor Day festivities attract many sightseers, vacationers

Although the weather wasn't altogether beautiful, people didn't stay away from the beach over Labor Day weekend.

There was plenty going on, like a volleyball tournament on Fourth Street and the Miller Genuine Draft Offshore Powerboat Races that ran within an eyeshot of the Oceanfront.

Although the power boats couldn't be seen too well without binoculars, spectators lined the beach to at least catch a glimpse. And even though they couldn't be seen to well, they could be heard all along the strip, even back a few blocks.

Two girls play on the beach instead of watching the boat race on Sunday at the beach.

Boat racing fans and general spectators gathered at the Clarion Resort and Conference Center on Fifth Street to watch and listen to the races going on offshore.

Two men, uninterested in the boat race, concentrate on hitting a volleyball on Fourth Street over Labor Day weekend.

Although they couldn't see too much, spectators lined the beach at the Oceanfront to catch a glimpse of the Miller

City's operating budget will program spending over two years rather than one turned down a twin proposal which would have directed the city manager to present five alternatives for the 1993 budget, none of which would include a tax increase.

In deleting that portion of the resolution, Councilmember said while no one wanted to increase taxes, they did not want to be placed in a position they couldn't get out of if the need did arise to increase taxes. Also, they said, presenting five alternative budgets would be too much of a hardship on the city staff.

Following a discussion of the Parker/Moss resolution during a Council workshop, Councilmember Louis R. Jones, said that it was clear that "a large amount of agreement was evident as to the intent of the resolution, that there is not a lot of dissent. We're all interested in coming forth with a budget that has the least amount of tax impact."

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf, noting that the Capital Improvement Program will be considered this week, said the schools are not taking a cut, so savings will be emphasized on the city side. She said that Council will need to know whether there has to be some adjustment in the projects selected last May, that assessments have to be checked to see if they're up-to-date, and staff would need them to present some answers.

Jones concurred with the mayor's summation of the work ahead. He said that he did not want Council to box itself in over taxes because of the unforeseen - such as mandates initially, the programs were reinstated in the budget later.

He also said that he did not want to tie the manager down by requiring him to present five alternatives.

In explaining the resolution, Moss said that the first year would be for appropriations and the second year for planning.

Of the five alternatives, he said that Council has no time to come up with its own alternatives, but Moss, that other things have higher priorities.

City Manager James K. Spore said that nobody has recommended a tax increase, but based on projected expenditures, an increase would be needed. He said that salaries are driving up expenditures.

He explained that almost 12 percent of the operating budget is for debt service, 54 percent for education and 14 percent for public safety. With these priorities recognized, the city is left with 20 percent of approximately $660,000 to work with.

Pointing out that the budget department has been cut by 26 percent, Spore also wanted to know the detail Council wanted for the second year of the biennium.

Councilmember James Brazier said that, if Council is thinking about a tax increase for schools he would be against it unless citizens voted for one in a referendum.

Councilmember William D. Sessions, Jr. said that he agreed with the mayor, that he saw education as a priority.

Moss also said that traditionally, schools are the last item funded when it is the top priority.

Spore said that the city managed to avoid a tax increase last spring, but that it wasn't easy.

Councilmember Robert W.

Clyburn said that the city is talking about adding $70 million in more schools and personnel has already been cut back. But there's a limit to the amount that can be cut, he said, and still have efficient business. If he voted to go along with the no-tax increase part of the resolution, he said, he would be voting for something to which he did not know all the answers.

Councilmember Paul J.

Lantigne said that the city should stop looking at real estate taxes to pay all the bills and start looking at more user fees.

He said that he had no problem with subsidizing recreation centers generally, but did not think it equitable for 10 percent of the residents who use the center to pay a $20 to $25 user fee while the rest of the population subsidizes the uses at the centers.

"We're all interested in coming forth with a budget that has the least amount of tax impact."

Councilman Louis Jones

from state and federal governments and figures on assessments.

He said that the budget had not increased in two years; in fact it decreased by $1 million for the current year, but since the city economy experienced some inflation the $1 million is significant. He said that Council has downsized government, but that although a number of appropriations were cut requiring five alternatives forces the staff to present realistic choices.

By April 1, when Council has to think about approving the budget, he said it will "find itself on a train that can't wait."

Moss also said that traditionally, schools are the last item funded when it is the top priority.

Spore said that the city managed to avoid a tax increase last spring, but that it wasn't easy.

DAR resumes its meetings

The Lynnhaven Daughters Chapter, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, will resume monthly meetings on Saturday, Sept. 12 at 10 a.m. at the historic Francis Land House, 3131 Virginia Beach Boulevard, with the new regent, Lucy Weisheit, and new officers: Barbara Ferguson, first vice regent; Judith Connors, second vice regent; Sandra Milburn, secretary; Paulette Anglin, treasurer; Mary Vose, historian, Anne Comer, librarian, Pat Corleto will continue to serve as chaplain and Mary Ann McCrary will continue to register.

The guest speaker for the opening meeting will be Elizabeth Thornton. Thornton is the president of the League of Women Voters of Norfolk and Virginia Beach and will discuss the timely topic of "Women in Voting."

Members and guests planning to attend should call either Nevelyn Stark or Paulette Anglin, hostesses, and are encouraged to bring along any sweaters they would care to donate to the Virginia Power sweater recycling project. In particular, infant and toddler sweaters are needed.

Snyder succeeds Harold Heischober. As King Neptune XIX, Snyder will reign over the festival's Royal Court and serve as symbolic host of the 16-day celebration, this year between September 12 and 27.

Snyder is president of Checked Flag Motor Car Company, Inc. He is the Toyota state chairman of the American Imported Automobile Dealer Association and a past president of the Hampton Roads Automobile Dealer Association.

Snyder is founder and past president of the Honda National Dealer Council, as well as a past member of the Toyota National Dealer Council, Suzuki National Dealer Council, Jaguar Club and the National Automobile Dealer Association, Industry Relations Committee. In 1980, Snyder was named a Sports Illustrated Import Automobile Dealer of Distinction.

Snyder serves on the board of directors for Commerce Bank and is secretary for the board of trustees for the Virginia Marine Science Museum. He also is chairman of the DePaul Health Foundation and a member of the board of directors for DePaul. Snyder is a past member of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce board of directors. He has been involved with dozens of other area charitable, civic and community organizations.

Snyder was born in Norfolk and attended the University of Virginia and New York University. He also served in the United States Air Force.

He and his wife, Jean, resident in Virginia Beach. They have four daughters, a son and six grandchildren.

Virginia Beach Neptune Festival has been named as one of the top 20 events by the Southeastern Tourism Society, 310-member private consortium representing nine southeastern states.

The 1992 Neptune Festival is chaired by Frederick "Buck" Moss. Moss succeeds Joseph M. Giannacoli, the 1991 chairman.

The chairman's responsibilities are to oversee all operations of the 16-day festival.

Moss is founder and president of Moss Oil Company, Inc., the Amoco Branded Jobber for southside Hampton Roads. He also is owner and president of Virginia Lubricants, Inc., the Amoco Lube Distributor for the state of Virginia.

Moss is a director on the Virginia Beach board of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce, and a director of the Cape Henry Rotary. He is vice president of Sunwheelers, Inc. of Virginia Beach and past vice president of the board of trustees, Humana Bayside Hospital. Moss is a former triton for the Virginia Beach Neptune Festival and has chaired several festival committees. Moss also chaired the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce's Mayfest committee for three years.

He and his wife, Norma, reside in Virginia Beach. They have two daughters, a son and three grandchildren.

More than 250 compete for medals

Three health-oriented Virginia Beach Hospital Neptune Festival events have been set for Saturday, Sept. 19, the 5K run, Wellness Walk and 1-Mile Fun Run.

All events are being sponsored by and held at Virginia Beach General Hospital, behind the Health Education Center. Early registration may be made by calling 481-8141. On the day of the events, the 5K registration begins at 7:30 a.m., with race time at 9 a.m. The Wellness Walk begins at 8 a.m. and the 1-Mile Run at 8:30 a.m.

Pre-event costs for all events until September 11 are $10. After September 11, the cost will be $12. The costs for both the Wellness Walk and 1-Mile Fun Run are $8.

"This is the 11th year of these competitions. We expect more than 250 participants who are trying to take home one of the Neptune Festival medals," said Fred Moss, this year's festival chairman.

Categories for judging include 5K - top three male, female in each age category; Fun Run - top male, female in 12 and younger and 13 and older; Walk - top male, female 39 and younger, 40 to 54 and 55 and older.

Youth Art Show set for Sept. 27

The Naval Air Federal Credit Union Youth Art Show is set for Sunday, Sept. 27 from 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. along the Boardwalk at 27th Street.

"The show features the best art from high school students in the city of Virginia Beach," said Fred Moss, this year's chairman.

The exhibition is free and open to the public. For more information call 464-3421.

Edward B. Snyder is King Neptune XIX.

Meet the King at the Royal Pavilion

King Neptune's Royal Pavilion, a new program this year, will be on the boardwalk at 22nd Street during the Boardwalk Festival Weekend.

Everyone is invited to meet King Neptune XIX, Edward B. Snyder, for photos, poster signings and greetings.

Royal Banquet and Ball at Cavalier

Ball is the formal presentation of King Neptune XIX Edward B. Snyder and his Royal Court. It is considered the first major public event of this festival.

Two bands will perform, Sunny Days in the ballroom and the TFC Band outside on the dance pavilion. The sponsor is Tidewater Health Care.

1992 Neptune Festival Princesses

Buck Moss, chairman of the 1992 Virginia Beach Neptune Festival, announced the selection of the six Princesses, three Royal Ladies of the Realm and five Royal Court Attendants for this year's festival.

The Princesses are selected by a festival committee each spring on the basis of high scholastic ratings, school and civic organization involvement and personality.

The Royal Ladies of the Realm, daughters or granddaughters of members of the Royal Order of Neptune, are selected as special attendants to the Neptune Festival court.

Attendants are children or grandchildren of members of the Royal Order of Neptune.

The Princesses, Ladies of the Realm and Attendants accompanied King Neptune XIX at all official appearances of the Royal Court. In addition, they participated in other area events throughout the coming year, according to Moss.

The 1992 Princesses include:

Kimberly Atwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Atwood. Atwood served as a page in the 1989 Virginia General Assembly and is a member of the S.C.A. Executive Council. She also participates in cheerleading, gymnastics, softball and 4-H. Atwood plans to attend college, majoring in Marine Biology.

Jennifer Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Taylor Johnson, Jr. Black is active in a number of activities and has been named to the National Junior Honor Society Executive Board and has been recognized for the Sportsmanship Spotlight Student of the Month. Black plans to attend college with a focus of either journalism or advertising.

Laura Burbage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barry Burbage. Burbage is vice president of the School Spirit Club and manager of the boys basketball team. She is a member of the School Show Choir and was named three years to District Chorus. Upon graduation, Burbage plans to attend college and is interested in the law profession.

Tiffany Litz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Litz. She is a member of the Coquetttes dance team, the SCA Executive Council, Key Club and the Virginia Episcopal Planning Board. Litz plans to attend college to become a physical therapist.

Amanda Ries, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Ries. She is on the yearbook staff and is the student director and understudy for Salem High School's play, "Odd Couple." Upon graduation Ries plans to attend college, majoring in elementary education.

Courtney Totushek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Totushek. She is a member of the National Honor Society, honor court, model U.N., yearbook staff and is involved in a variety of other activities. Courtney plans to major in international law when she attends college. The 1992 Royal Ladies of the Realm are: Terri Flounders, daughter of Mr. Anne Flounders and Mr. Thomas E. Flounders, III; Alice Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Wayne Jones; Mary McCollough Ray, daughter of Mrs. Mary M. Young and Mr. Richard T. Ray.

The 1992 Royal Court attendants are: Lesley Kim Darrow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Sean Brickell; Lindsey A. Frantz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Frantz; Ruth E. Jones,

and Mrs. Edward S. Garcia, Sr.; Wai Wong, son of Dr. and Mrs. George S. Wong.

Annual Boardwalk Celebration is better than ever

"The annual Boardwalk Celebration of the Neptune Festival is considered by many to be one of the highlights of the event," says Fred Moss, this year's festival chairman. "So we've expanded again in 1992."

Held this year along the oceanfront on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 25, 26 and 27, there will be many new and exciting additions.

On Saturday, spectators will be treated to the color and excitement of the Neptune Festival Catamaran Race, beginning at noon.

Boardwalk stages will offer a dizzying array of entertainment this year. At 11th Street, the

Budweiser Oceanside Stage will offer a great variety of rock and top-fourty acts, while at 18th Street, the Budweiser Surfside

Stage will offer top country and western performers.

The Miller Beach, Cabana Stage, at 24th Street Park, will feature Beach Music and the Coca-Cola Family Stage at 15th Street will host a variety of family and children's entertainment.

"As in past years, the festival has arranged a superb lineup of talent to perform throughout the three days," Moss said. "There will be something for everyone to enjoy."

"We also have a wide array of foods and beverages that people have come to expect from Boardwalk Weekend at the festival."

Nearly 70 vendors have been selected to participate, offering food items from around the world.

A complete listing of entertainment and times of performances is included in this news kit. For additional information, call Neptune Festival at 498-0215.

The Cavalier Hotel is the host for the Earthshakers' Ball

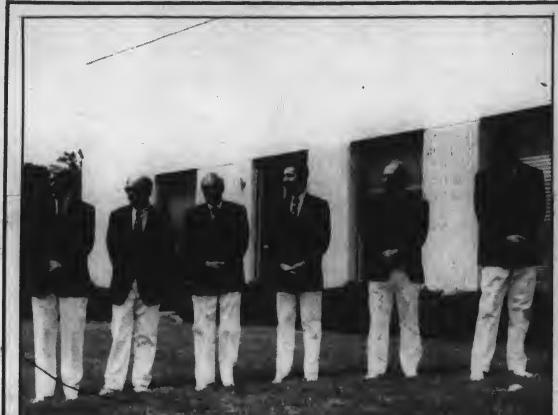

The second annual Neptune Festival Earthshakers' Ball is set for Saturday, Sept. 12 at 10 until 1 p.m. Advance tickets are $60 per couple or $30 per person at the door. Tickets are limited.

"We created the Earthshakers' Ball to be a more freesprired and fanciful occasion as a part of the annual Neptune Grand Ball," said Fred Moss, this year's chairman of Neptune Festival.

Dress is black tie.

The ball will take place outside on the Pavilion at Cavalier Beach Club. The TPC Band will provide the entertainment.

Call 498-0215 for tickets or more information.

Fireworks to light up 14th Street pier

The Neptune Festival fireworks display is set for Saturday, Sept. 26 at 9 p.m. from the end of the Virginia Beach pier on 14th Street.

"People all along the boardwalk will have prime viewpoints again this year," said Fred Moss, this year's festival chairman.

The state-of-the-art fireworks display, designed by Zambelli "The First Family of Fireworks," will follow the theme of the festival. Fountain-like nautical fireworks with golden accents will shoot out of the water along with flying saucer fireworks exploding in the sky. The finale is planned to be the biggest extravaganza in the history of the event.

The performers are approximately 20 minutes long and is sponsored by Norfolk Southern and Pizza Hut.

Virginia Opera announces its 1992-1993 season

General Director Peter Mark has announced Virginia Opera's 1992-93 season, a four opera schedule which includes well-known classics by Bizet and Puccini, a unique wild-west version of Donizetti's most popular comedy, and a very innovative production of Virginia Opera's first Gilbert and Sullivan work.

In a new development announced earlier, two of the four operas will be presented at George Mason University's Center for the Arts in Fairfax, Virginia. The company's 18th season includes:

Carmen by Georges Bizet - One of the world's best loved operas, Carmen, will open the season in October.

Georges Bizet's masterpiece, set against the vibrant colors of 1800s Spain, is the story of a passionate gypsy who recklessly pursues her desires, despite the rules of fate.

The mezzo-soprano title role has been double-cast with Cecilia Angell and Carol Sparrow. South America Angell has sung Carmen, both here and abroad several times, but debuts with Virginia Opera. Sparrow, who sang the Composer in Virginia Opera's Ariadne Auf Naxos and Dorabella in Cosi Fan Tutte during the 1990-91 season, made her Carnegie Hall debut in 1990 singing highlights from Carmen with the New York Pops Orchestra under the baton of Maestro Peter Mark.

The role of Don Jose will be sung by tenor Daniel Hendrick, a Metropolitan Opera Audition Regional winner making his Virginia Opera debut, and a second debuting artist.

Carmen's memorable score with such well-known numbers as the "Toreador Song" and "Habanera," will be sung in French, with English supertitles. The dates for Carmen are October 23, 24 and 25 in Norfolk, October 28 and 30 in Richmond, and at George Mason University on November 6 and 7.

Don Pasquale by Gaetano Donizetti - In a unique production of Gaetano Donizetti's comic masterpiece, Virginia Opera next presents a rollicking wild-west version of Don Pasquale. This tale of a middle-aged bachelor from Rome who seeks his fortune in the new world is a joyous mixture of music and comedy, and is widely considered one of the premier examples of 19th century opera buffa.

Because of the intensive performance schedule, the title role will be double-cast. Bass-baritone Shawn Roy, Dr. Bartolo in Virginia Opera's Marriage of Figaro last season, will alternate in the role with bass-baritone Matthew Spady. Sung in English, this American Pasquale will be presented at the Virginia Beach Pavilion on November 25, 27, 28 and 29 and at Richmond's Carpenter Center on December 9 and 11.

The Mikado by Gilbert and Sullivan - For the first production of 1993, Virginia Opera will present another unique version of a classic favorite, The Mikado. This British masterpiece takes a decidedly contemporary turn as we take it to post-industrial Japan for this innovative, all-new production. It retains all the brilliant wit of the original libretto while adding a little hip-hop and a lot of fun! It will premier in Virginia Beach on January 20, 1993 and continue on the 22, 23 and 24. Next it will go to George Mason University for performances on January 29 and 30. In Richmond, it will be offered on February 3 and 5.

Tosca by Giacomo Puccini - The season finale is Giacomo Puccini's famous Tosca, the passionate melodrama of tragic love sealed by fate. Set in war-torn Rome during the time of Napoleon, Tosca is the story of a fiery prima donna who is forced to bargain for her lover's life. The title role will be shared by sopranos Susan Owen and Badienne Gray, both of whom will debut with Virginia Opera. Owen recently sang Tosca for Central City Opera, Gray for Opera New England. Performed in Italian with English super-titles, this powerful tale is driven and heightened by Puccini's compelling score. Performances in Norfolk are on March 12, 13 and 14; in Richmond on March 24 and 26.

Conductors, stage directors, designers and additional cast members will be announced at a later date.

Season subscriptions offer discounts of up to 25 percent off the price of single tickets and are now on sale in both Hampton Roads and Richmond. Additional discounts for groups, students and military personnel are also available in both cities.

Due to the renovation of the Norfolk Center Theater into the Harrison Opera House, Hampton Roads subscribers can elect a new Saturday night series. Prices range from $49 to $199. Only those subscribing to the 92-93 season will get priority consideration when the Harrison choice of six different series, each including Carmen and Tosca at Chrysler Hall in Norfolk and Don Pasquale and The Mikado at the Virginia Beach Pavilion.

For the first time, Hampton Roads subscribers can elect a new Saturday night series. Prices range from $49 to $199. Only those subscribing to the 92-93 season will get priority consideration when the Harrison Opera House opens for the 93-94 season.

For more information about Hampton Roads subscriptions call 623-1223, Southside, or 877-2550 on the Peninsula.

In Richmond, performance nights remain Wednesday and Friday at the Carpenter Center for the Performing Arts. Prices range from $65 to $155. For more information call 643-6004.

See A New You to loose those unwanted inches

The body wrap as an approach to the age old problem of reducing inches and getting rid of unsightly cellulite bulges is to most of us relatively new. Yet it has long been popular with the very rich in the most exclusive salons of Europe - without strict diets, tiresome exercises, steam-baths, etc. - as an easy way to get rid of unwanted inches and cellulite.

European Wrap Systems is a safe and effective way, in approximately two hours, for men and women to lose inches. You are in the wrap itself for 60 to 70 minutes, with the remaining time being used for measuring, wrapping, undressing and dressing.

During this 60 to 70 minutes, the wraps will be firm and you may relax, or, for improved inch loss, you can do some light bending and twisting. No regimented, strenuous exercises are required. You will feel very cool during your wrap - it's not a sauna treatment!

In total contrast to sauna or cellulose heat wrap processes that produce only temporary and totally indiscriminate water loss results, our exclusive process is non-dehydrative (actually a cool process) resulting in little or no water (or water weight) loss and thus ensures that the inches we firm, tone and reduce off body measurements ... will stay off!

Through special techniques with the wraps, we remove toxins and compact fatty tissue and tighten skin while we are detoxifying the body. This is what we call body sculpturing - we lift the hip, flatten the bulges on the thighs, scoop in the stomach, cut in a waistline, and tighten the skin overall.

Because we develop a firmer, smoother muscle base, over which we are firming, toning, compacting, and detoxifying soft tissue, men and women will show excellent results in the legs, stomach, arms, and chest.

Women in particular will show excellent results in getting rid of unsightly cellulite, in conjunction with greatly reducing stretch marks. In fact, any tissue that responds to firming, toning, and tightening, will show excellent results in response to our exclusive body wrapping process.

Each wrap is professionally applied by trained contour specialists. The back bracing and joint supporting manner in which you are wrapped will be determined from your personal health history questionnaire which is taken on each individual.

Because each wrap is thereby personalized, hundreds of thousands of individuals have been wrapped with our exclusive body wrap and shape process with absolutely no ill side effects.

So don't wait - "Be the best you can be with European Wrap Systems."

East of Napa has wines for every occasion

Suppose you're planning a special meal and would like some advice on choosing just the right wine to enhance it.

Or maybe you'd just like some general information on what types of wine are normally recommended with your favorite foods.

Or you'd like to buy a book or attend a class to learn more about wine and food.

East of Napa, Virginia Beach's newest wineshop specializing in fine domestic wines, has a variety of means to assist you.

For a specific meal, stop in at anytime and ask for a few suggestions on what types of wine would best complement your food.

"We have regular customers who come in every week, describe what they plan to cook for dinner that weekend, and ask for our suggestions on wines to match with these foods," says Jennifer Bradfute, manager of the shop in the Chambord Commons Shopping Center.

"We want our shop to be a place where people won't feel intimidated; we want our customers to feel free to ask questions. For folks who love wine, there's always something new to learn, and often our customers have helped us by telling us about great wines they've tried at local restaurants.

"Lately we have a lot of customers who want to learn more about red wines; they've heard about the health benefits of drinking red wine, but have not liked many of the red wines they've tried to date. We can recommend lighter-style, non-tannic red wines that are well-suited to this type of customer."

East of Napa personnel enjoy helping novice wine-buyers, as well as serious wine enthusiasts, and are available to offer information and advice in a relaxed setting where customers can feel free to browse and read about various types of wine. Free tastings are held every Saturday, and a newsletter goes out to all regular customers with articles on wine and food, tips for wine-buyers and information about new wine releases.

To learn a lot about wine in one evening, you can sign up for an overview class for beginners, held every other month (the next will be on October 5). This two-hour class covers all of the basics class.

And the shop will repeat its popular "Football Widow Wine-Tasting Classes" on most Sunday afternoons, beginning in October; call 463-0212 for information on all classes, or to receive the newsletter.

Sylvan Learning Center saves you time and money

Why spend a significant amount of money at a diagnostic clinic such as Sylvan when tutors are so inexpensive?

The difference is the same as giving home remedies for a serious illness rather than consulting a doctor for exact diagnosis and prescription. The patient may get better, but surely it will take much longer.

Tutors are often excellent teachers who care about their pupils, but they do not offer diagnostic testing to find exact problems, do not have access to over $40,000 worth of materials and equipment, and do not write individual prescriptions for their pupils.

Almost always, math or reading problems occur over a period of time, involving skills missed in earlier years. The problem then becomes more complicated, requiring the teacher to look back at former skills to find out what the child missed along the way. Tutors are excellent for helping students learn foreign languages or other specific subjects which only last a semester or two and can be taught without diagnostic testing. However, with reading and math problems, tutors must move more slowly, looking for problems as they teach the child.

Because it pinpoints exact problems at the time of testing, the Sylvan program moves at least three, and sometimes five times as quickly as tutors to remedy the problem. In estimating tutoring costs, this must be taken into consideration. Tutors move much more slowly and therefore usually end up costing more.

Time is of the utmost consideration in helping a child get to grade level. If your child has fallen behind, there is daily loss of self-esteem. Sylvan moves quickly because we only teach what the child does not know.

In making the decision to help your child, consider these two factors: time and money. Sylvan moves much more quickly than tutors and can save you money.

YOU KNOW HIS TRUE POTENTIAL, BUT YOU CAN'T SEEM TO BRING IT OUT.

* where luxury is always affordable

Asterisques* - dedicated to customer satisfaction

In October of 1990, after a year of research and test-marketing, Pamela and Stephen Lichtenstein opened Asterisques*, a store dedicated to the sale of fine cubic zirconia jewelry.

Asterisques* is located in the new Chambord Commons Shopping Center, at the intersection of Great Neck Road and Virginia Beach Boulevard, in Virginia Beach.

From the outset, the concept has remained simple. Use 14KT gold settings, and remarkably realistic cubic zirconias, to create jewelry that looks the same as pieces costing thousands of dollars. Then, sell those pieces for a few hundred dollars, while supply the customer with the same level from a Tiffany or Cartier. The response to the store has been nothing short of fantastic.

Pamela Lichtenstein is quick to point out that with today's quality cubic zirconias, it is virtually impossible, without sophisticated testing, to tell whether a stone is mined or man-made. "Because of that, our customers can literally build impressive jewelry wardrobes for a tenth of the price they would spend on mined gemstone jewelry," she said recently.

In addition to ready-made pieces, Asterisques* customers can also design their own creations and have them custom made to the specifications. "They can bring life to old pieces, too," she said, "by mixing and matching mined stones with synthetic stones and cubic zirconia."

"With the availability of cubic zirconias in a variety of gem colors (blue, green, yellow, red, pink, etc.), the range of design possibilities is virtually limitless."

Mrs. Lichtenstein also stated that, "unlike similar jewelry sold on QVC, or in mail order catalogs, our customers are able to see the actual jewelry, try it on, and guarantee that it's to their satisfaction before they pay for it."

Asterisques* offers a wide selection of pieces (rings, necklaces, bracelets, earrings and pins), as well as the repair and custom-design service, all at a fraction of the cost of jewelry set with mined gemstones.

Mrs. Lichtenstein suggested that any jewelry lover should plan a visit to Asterisques. "We think that we offer the Hampton Roads jewelry shopper a unique and cost-effective alternative." Her current customers obviously agree.

Monohull race set for Sept. 19

The 1992 Neptune Festival Chesapeake/Atlantic Race for Monohull sailboats will be held on Sept. 19.

The race will take place Saturday, Sept. 19 and will start at 9:30 a.m. beginning at Thimble Shoals Light in South Chesapeake Bay and ending at the beachfront at the Life Saving Museum at 24th Street.

About 70 boats are expected to enter the open ocean competition, which is sponsored by the Broad Bay Sailing Association and sanctioned by the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Racing Association.

Pre-registration is suggested. However, entries will be accepted on the morning of Sept. 19. The entry fee is $40. To obtain an entry form or for additional information call 422-1587.

Sandcastle Classic set for Sept. 26 & 27

The Tidewater Health Care and Virginia Beach General Hospital Sandcastle Classic is set for Saturday, September 26 and Sunday, Sept. 27 along the boardwalk between 28th Street and 32nd Street.

"This event is in its 19th year and gets bigger every year," said Fred Moss, this year's festival chairman. "We get participants from all over the United States. And more spectators attend every year."

The event is from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday and from 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Sunday. Anyone interested in building should call 446-2778 during working hours.

Categories of competition include (Saturday) youth and freelance groups. Entry fees for youth and freelance groups are $10 and $15 respectively. Sunday competition includes business/organizations ($50 fee), A.I.A. ($75 fee), masters team professional and sand sculptors ($100 fee), and masters solo ($75 fee).

The Sandcastle Classic is sponsored by Tidewater Health Care and Virginia Beach General Hospital. Trophy prizes in all groups will be awarded. The masters team will receive $2,000 first place, $1,000 second and $500 for third place. The winner of the masters solo will receive $1,000.

The sandcastle building contest has become a major attraction for those with an architectural eye.

To the left, spectators look down at contestants from the boardwalk as the contest begins.

Established For Those Who Care

We have been serving families in the Tidewater area for the past 25 years. During this time we have witnessed the grief and stress of families who have had to make sudden decisions for which they were totally unprepared.

We all try to protect our family from things that might happen. Doesn't it make good sense to protect them from something that will?

A & G brings excitement to quality car buying

A&G Auto Sales, a high volume dealership operating in Virginia Beach at various locations as "The Adult's Toy Store," has brought excitement to quality car buying in the area.

Known for their slogan, "We make excellence affordable," they have done just that for years now, and have done it in a manner that has made so many former buyers especially proud of the now well known A&G emblem on the rear of their auto, along with the special adult toy store license plate frame.

If you have never visited one of their convenient locations, you are missing a treat! You may never have thought of shopping for a car as "fun," but you will after your very first visit!

There are beautiful paintings of exotic automobiles on the outside of their showrooms, colorful blue and white checkered "winner's" flags fly from above, and all the highly polished autos on display, make it as exciting for adults as a "toy store" is for kids. Inside the showroom are interesting displays, along with pictures of both local and national celebrities who have purchased one of their quality vehicles.

With over 14 years of experience, these dependable experts in the used car business offer the people of our area an excellent line of quality, dependable imported and domestic cars, specializing in BMW, Porsche, Mercedes, Jaguar, Saab, Volvo, Acura, Honda, Nissan, Cadillac and Corvette.

This firm takes pride in each car that they sell and every effort is made to thoroughly check each unit so that their new owners will have years of trouble-free performance. This is in keeping with their policy of giving their customers a great deal on each car purchased there.

If you need assistance in the financing of your car, it should be pointed out that this firm, as one of their services, will assist in securing the necessary financing on any unit you choose, or provide information to help you obtain the required financing.

If you are in need of a top-notch used imported or domestic car, with dependability, economy, performance and style at a reasonable price, be sure to see A&G Auto, with four convenient locations to serve you.

They can be found at 5048 Virginia Beach Boulevard, 499-7863; at 5012 Virginia Beach Boulevard, 490-4734; at 604 Newtown Road, 490-2225; and at 640 Baker Road, 499-6195.

Remember, you can stop here and always buy with confidence. They make excellence affordable, and their fine reputation is your guarantee of satisfaction!

More than 230 locals to compete in Junior Open Tennis Tournament

The Neptune Junior Open Tennis Tournament will be held on Saturday through Sunday, Sept. 12 through 20, at the Owl Creek Municipal Tennis Center.

Hours are Saturdays and Sundays 9 a.m. until 6 p.m.; Monday and Tuesday 4 to 10 p.m. No play on Wednesday. Play resumes on Thursday and Friday from 4 to 10 p.m.

"The Neptune Junior Open Tennis Tournament is one of the largest junior tennis tournaments in Hampton Roads," said Fred Moss, the festival's chairman. "Now in its 14th year, the tournament attracts over 230 participants. Its popularity is astounding."

The tournament will offer trophies in the singles and doubles competitions in the following categories; girls and boys divisions for ages 10 and under, 12 and under, 14 and under, 16 and under and 18 and under. Cost is $6 per person for singles and $8 per team for doubles.

Call Gayle Adcock, tournament director, at 471-5884 to obtain an application or to register. Spectators are welcome. The deadline for registration is Sept. 3.

From 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. children can get plenty of sand between their toes during a kaleidoscope of hands-on activities located between 14th Street and 17th Street on the boardwalk and oceanfront.

In addition to kid-size sandcastle building, activities will include fishing for sea treasures, a clam dig, frisbee bull's eye, mini volleyball, paddleball, tetherball, mini-golf, mini baseball and face painting. All activities are free and open to the public and parents will be encouraged to join in fun.

Souvenirs will be given to children who take part in the oceanfront games. The event is sponsored by Centel Cellular.

Children's entertainment will also be offered at the 13th and 15th Street Stages, featuring a variety youth-oriented music and entertainers.

The Youth Day shoreline activities and entertainment are coordinated by the Youth Activities Unit of the Virginia Beach Parks and Recreation Department. For more information, call 471-5884.

American Retirement Homes - growing old with dignity

South Hampton Roads has three American Retirement Homes residences, Ghent Arms in Norfolk, King's Grant in Virginia Beach, and Churchland House in Portsmouth. These homes blend the comforts of independent living with the security associated with assisted-care services.

American Retirement Homes are outstanding in their field because of the many unique features they offer.

Each home is small, 40 to 60 residents, with many living rooms, dining rooms and recreational rooms and recreational areas. They are filled with art, fresh flowers, sculpture and other visual pleasures. Our homes are designed with lots of windows so they are filled with light and the feeling of outdoors is always present.

At American Retirement Homes worrisome chores are taken care of for you. Your meals are prepared and served regularly, your clothing is kept clean and fresh, transportation to appointments is provided, and there are beauty shops on the premises. The welcome mat is always out to receive visitors.

Ghent Arms is located on a tree-lined street in a charming Norfolk neighborhood and could easily be country inn. A leisurely stroll to the end of the block offers the beauty of Stockley Gardens, where neighbors enjoy pausing to feed the birds or watch the squirrels. From there, it's a pleasant walk to the waters of the Hague for one of the city's most picturesque views. But the building at the corner of Redgate and Manteo in Ghent isn't a country inn or an elegant hotel, though it was one nearly 100 years ago. Today it is home to Ghent Arms, our very special retirement community for those who need assisted living.

Located in a quiet, residential neighborhood of Virginia Beach is King's Grant, a two story brick structure reminiscent of Colonial Virginia Architecture. The grounds offer quiet sitting areas, and a small pond complete with ducks and a connecting bridge leading to a neighborhood church. King's Grant is convenient to shopping areas. Lynnhaven Mall, Tidewater's largest and Rose Hall Shoppes, an upscale group of boutiques, are nearby.

For those who need the security of assisted living without going to a nursing home, King's Grant can be home in the best of the word.

Churchland House is located in a peaceful Portsmouth neighborhood right off the new Western Freeway. Just a few blocks away is Coleman's Nursery, home of the renowned "Christmas Wonderland" in December. During the summer, the neighborhood offers beautifully wooded Churchland Park, which is less than a mile away. Also nearby are several quaint churches, Chesapeake Square Mall, and downtown Churchland with its many boutiques and eateries.

With its delightful atmosphere and lovely surroundings, coupled with excellent care, Churchland House is truly a place which can be called home.

American Retirement Homes has an "aging in place policy," which means in effect that our residents should never have to leave any of our residences to a nursing home.

At Ghent Arms, King's Grant and Churchland House, growing old with dignity is what it's all about.

The Banana Boat Volleyball Tournament will be held on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 26 and 27, beginning at 9 a.m. at 10th Street at the Oceanfront.

Legacy of Edgar Cayce lives on in Va. Beach

By ROBERT GRANT

Edgar Cayce was not a physician, nor was he an educated counselor or learned mystic - while he was awake, that is.

It could be said that Edgar Cayce is most famous for "talking in his sleep." But he did not mumble unintelligibly - he spoke clearly and with authority. While asleep, Cayce became the physician, the counselor, the mystic.

It all began in 1901, in Hopkinsville, Ky., when 24-year-old Cayce lost his voice. For more than year, he could not speak above a whisper. Local doctors were baffled, as they seemed to be no physical problem with his vocal chords. As a last resort, physicians recommended that Cayce see a hypnotist - and find out if there was a "mental" cause for the ailment.

In the presence of his fiancee, Gertrude, and local doctors, hypnotist Al Layne put Cayce in a hypnotic sleep. Layne gave Cayce the suggestion to "tell us what is wrong." After a pause, Cayce spoke clearly for the first time in a year and he diagnosed his own ailment, saying there was a constriction of the vocal chords brought by stress and an imbalance in circulation.

He instructed Layne (while still in the sleep state) to give him a hypnotic suggestion that would restore the circulation to normalcy. This suggestion was given, Cayce was awakened, and his speech was completely restored. Interestingly enough, Cayce could not recall anything he said while under hypnosis.

Subsequently, the doctors found they could put Cayce to "sleep," give him the name and address of a patient (Cayce didn't have to know the individual personally), and he would then accurately diagnose the ailment from the sleep state and outline a regimen of treatment.

Doctors were amazed that Cayce used the medical terminology of a well-educated physician, yet he himself had no more than an eighth grade education. More baffling still, the doctors discovered, if the patients followed Cayce's advice, they fully recovered - often from what modern medicine would call "incurable" diseases.

The information that he gave while in this sleep state came to be called "readings." Over the course of the next 45 years, Cayce would give more than 14,000 of these, covering over 10,00 topics. The Learning by doing is La Petite's approach

It's natural for you to want your child to feel secure and loved. It's also natural to want your child to have the experiences and develop the skills that will be needed in the years ahead.

And, perhaps more than anything else, it's natural for you to want your child to enjoy being a child - to laugh, learn, play and experience the magic of childhood.

Fortunately, you can provide your child with these special feelings and experiences in a loving, caring, exciting environment close to home - at La Petite Academy®.

For more than 20 years, La Petite has set the standard for providing children with learning activities that are as enriching as they are enjoyable. As the Parent's Partner® in a child's early development, they're making it easy for you and your child to experience a love for learning together.

The early childhood professionals at La Petite are dedicated to a child's total development. That's why they've created a setting that's both stimulating and playful. Their entire approach is based on the idea that children learn best by doing.

That's why, at La Petite, you'll find such a well balanced combination of interest centers and physical play areas are at the core of the innovative "Learning Center" concept for early childhood education. Each center offers hands-on learning experiences that are meaningful to children's everyday lives.

They'll take care of your baby - your way. At La Petite, children six weeks to one year old are cared for in an environment that feels like home. Besides having training in infant care and safety, the infant care staff is dedicated to providing a loving, nurturing environment for babies, just like you do.

And they're proud to maintain an open-door policy - parents are invited to visit unannounced at any time. They'll help your toddler make big strides in learning. For a toddler, walking and talking opened a whole new world of discovery. That's why the toddler program at La Petite is designed to make the most of developmental milestones of toddlers - initiating sounds, putting toys together, matching pictures with objects and learning words. They help your child feel comfortable playing and interacting with other toddlers.

They help you share in each day's experiences by providing you with a daily activities sheet that describes the types of play and learning activities he or she has participated in that day.

Fortunately, kids aren't the only ones who get special attention at La Petite. Because their program focuses so completely on the needs and preferences of each individual child, it's only natural for them to provide parents with the opportunity to actively participate in their children's developmental process.

You'll receive weekly parent letters, so you'll understand what your child is learning and how you can extend this learning at home. And periodically, you'll get a summary of your child's progress and its relevance to overall development.

Over the years, La Petite's pioneering efforts in early childhood education have set new standards of excellence across the nation.

Johnson & Wales - "The Harvard of Culinary Arts"

Johnson and Wales University has long been known as "the Harvard of Culinary Arts."

The prestigious institution, based in Providence, R.I., was founded in 1914 as a business college and has mushroomed over the years with added program offerings and additional branch campuses in Charleston, S.C., the island of St. Maarten and, locally in Norfolk.

Johnson and Wales University in Norfolk is a Culinary Arts Division. Students pursue either a certificate or an associate degree in Culinary Arts. Many students go to Providence to work in the college owned properties to fulfill their hands-on training for graduation requirements. Other students who qualify work in prestigious co-op sites such as the Greenbrier Country Club, Williamsburg Inn and Pinehurst in North Carolina.

Student enrollment at Johnson and Wales is a little over 200. Students can pursue their program either during the day or in the continuing education program during evenings and weekends. Students range from recent high school graduates to transfer students from other institutions or career change people.

No matter what their age, background, or experience, the students enroll with a strong desire to be a success in the food-service industry. And through the help of such required classes as Professional Development and Psychology of Success, J&W graduates are successful and in demand. Many graduates receive four to five job offers.

Some freshmen come to Johnson and Wales with cooking experience, however, it is not a prerequisite. If an applicant does have a considerable amount of foodservice experience, he may qualify for the Advanced Standing Program. If a person aspires to be a chef, caterer, owner of foodservice professional, Johnson and Wales - America's Career University - is the place to go to realize their goals.

Cooking is serious business at Johnson and Wales, but it doesn't have to be. The university offers hands-on recreational cooking classes for the "chef-by-hobby."

Courses are usually three hours long and range in price from $25 to $45, depending on the course content. All of the classes culminate with sampling of the food prepared.

Some popular classes are "Take Wok," "Christmas Catering" and "Cooking Cajun." This program for cooking enthusiasts is called "Chef's Choice." The Fall "Chef's Choice" brochure will be available in late August.

Call Johnson and Wales at 853-3908 to receive a brochure of the upcoming classes.

The chef's choice coordinator recommends early registration because classes fill quickly. Cooking's all the rage! And where better to learn to cook than with Johnson and Wales - where cooking is an art!

For more information about Johnson and Wales University and its programs, contact the Admissions Office at 853-3508 or 2428 Almeda Avenue, Suite 316, Norfolk, VA 23513.

Senior Citizens Golf Tournament scheduled for Sept. 22 and 23

The Sentara Health System Senior Citizens Golf Tournament is set for Tuesday, Sept. 22 and Wednesday, Sept. 23 at the Bow Creek Municipal Golf Course. The shotgun start is at 8 a.m.

"This is the only sporting event especially for seniors in the Neptune Festival," said Fred Moss, this year's festival chairman. "It has been a part of the festival since the beginning, starting with 24 players. This year there are more than 125 expected."

The event is open to men and women 55 and older, and registration is available at all city golf courses. The $84 per two-man team covers both days and the awards luncheon. The sponsor is Sentara Health System in cooperation with Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation.

For additional information contact chairperson Gloria Alley at 471-5884.

Colorful sails to dot the Oceanfront in second annual Catamaran Race

The Neptune Festival Catamaran Race is set for Saturday, Sept. 26 at noon. Registration will be at 2nd Street and the oceanfront at 9 a.m. and can be made the day of the race.

The second annual Neptune Festival Catamaran Race is another excellent addition to the fantastic roster of activities that the Neptune Festival offers," said Fred Moss, this year's festival chairman.

"The dozens of colorful sails gliding through the ocean off

Virginia Beach will be a dazzling sight for the thousands of Neptune Festival spectators at the beach," he continued.

The race will begin from 24th Street, sailing along a triangular course south around a marker near 5th Street, then sailing northeast around a marker off 25th Street, then northwest around a marker off 40th Street. The race will entail five laps total.

The entry fee is $10. For more information contact Steve House at 583-7709.

The Honor Guard will be featured at the Neptune Festival Parade on Saturday, Sept. 26 on Atlantic Avenue at the Oceanfront from 12th to 31st Street.

OUR STUDENTS ARE FLUENT IN FRENCH, ITALIAN AND THOUSAND ISLAND.

Prepare for a successful and exciting career in the hospitality industry by earning a Certificate with the service educator. Be in Wales graduate!

Children's World is sensitive to each child's need

Children's World Learning Centers is a leading provider of quality child care in the United States.

With more than 480 children care centers in 21 states, Children's World operates both community-based and employer-supported child care centers, as well as before and after school programs on the premises of elementary schools.

The company operates numerous on-site centers, including centers at the Pentagon, CoreStates Bank and the University of Virginia.

Recognized for its developmentally-based curriculum, Children's World encourages social, cognitive and physical development, while allowing children to learn at their own pace. Based in Golden, Colo., Children's World has been operating early childhood educational centers since 1969.

Children's World Learning Centers believes each child is a unique individual. We are sensitive to each child's social, emotional, intellectual and physical needs. We provide developmentally appropriate programs that focus on the process of learning and helping children enjoy successful experiences. We encourage not just learning, but the love of learning.

BE OUR GUEST FOR THE FEST.

By all means, celebrate the Neptune Festival. But don't stop there. Come to The Founders Inn, where the celebrating goes on all September long.

Join us for an unforgettable day tour of Colonial Williamsburg. Buses depart from The Founders Inn every Monday morning at 8:30.

On Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, speak your mind on "Tell America," a radio talk show broadcast from our atrium.

Take in "The Fantasticks," the longest running musical in American theatre history, and take advantage of our famed dinner-plus-theatre package.

Fond of country cookin', barbecue and bluegrass music? Then come to the Swan Terrace patio, Wednesday evenings at 6:30.

Then on Thursday, September 10th, come by and say "aloha," as we salute Hawaii with a fun-filled luau featuring Polynesian food and dances.

Finally, discover why our weekend brunches are the talk of the town. Saturday brunch is served from 11 to 2, and Sunday brunch, from 11 until 3.

Legacy of Edgar Cayce

Research and Enlightenment, Inc., is headquartered in Virginia Beach, Va., at 67th Street and Atlantic Avenue.

Virginia Beach was home to Cayce from 1925 until his death in January, 1945. In 1924, Cayce was told in a reading to build an institute "in or around the vicinity of Virginia Beach, Va." At that time he and his family lived in Dayton, Ohio. The readings said that Virginia Beach would be an ideal location for a spiritual research institute and also predicted that Virginia Beach would become a large resort and seaport - where people would come from all over the world to study Cayce's readings.

Sixty-eight years later, Cayce's prophecy has come true. The A.R.E. Library and Conference Center in Virginia Beach is host to thousands of visitors from all parts of the world, who attend conferences, workshops and lectures based on Cayce's psychic readings.

The library, which is open to the public, houses more than 14,000 verbatim transcripts of Cayce's psychic readings. Doctors, researchers, theologians and laypeople visit the library to discover what Cayce had to say about diseases which traditional medicine has been unable to cure.

Two-thirds of Cayce's readings are on physical illness and holistic health. The remaining one-third contain information on dreams, meditation, comparative religions, psychic development, the life of Jesus, home and marriage, business advice, the possibility of reincarnation, prophecy, science and technology, ancient civilizations and prehistoric mythology.

Since Cayce's death in 1945, more than 300 books have been written about his life and psychic work.

Although the A.R.E. headquarters is located in Virginia Beach, where visitors are always welcome, the A.R.E. community is a global network of people from all walks of life and spiritual traditions, who have found meaningful and life-transformative insights from the readings of Edgar Cayce.

The A.R.E. Visitor Center in Virginia Beach is open seven days a week, offering free lectures, video presentations and tours. For more information about Cayce and the A.R.E., call (804) 428-3588 or write P.O. Box 595, Virginia Beach, VA 23451-0595.

Country Fair Day set for Sept. 19

The Neptune Festival Country Fair Day is set for Saturday, Sept. 19. Held at the Farmer's Market on the corner of Landstown Road and Princess Anne Road, the event will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"Country Fair Day is a great family event of Neptune Festival. It's free, and since it began in 1983, it has become one of the best attended of all of the off-oceanfront programs," said Fred Moss, this year's festival chair-

Last year, more than 20,000 persons attended.

Displays from throughout Virginia will be shown. Included are 4-H display and contests, a craft festival, pig roast, farm equipment, hamster race and pig race, corn shucking contest, rides, petting zoo, square dancing, tractor trot, country/western music, clogging, ancient war reenactment and more. For more information call 427-4393.

Sr. Citizens' Ball to be held at the Dome

The Sentara Health System Senior Citizens' Ball is set for Thursday, Sept. 24. It will be held in Virginia Beach Dome from 8 to 11 p.m.

"The event has been part of Neptune Festival since its beginning and attracts up to 600 guests each year," said Fred Moss, this year's festival chairman.

Al Vincent and the Melody Makers will provide entertainment. Evening attire is requested. King Neptune XIX Edward B. Snyder and his Royal Court will attend.

The event is sponsored by Sentara Health System in cooperation with the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation.

There is no admission charge, but interested persons should call 471-3884 for reservations.

SERVING THE CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH

65th Year No. 38 25 Cents

If you're abused, you can turn to H.E.R.

The shelter provides refuge for battered women and children

By JULIE C. BROWN
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

A woman is beaten every 15 seconds in the United States.

And in order to help those women, Help and Emergency Response (H.E.R.) is a shelter in Portsmouth that serves women and children in the local area, including Virginia Beach, who have been victims of domestic violence, said Sue Sigler, executive director of H.E.R. In order to protect the clients of the shelter, the address is kept confidential, Sigler said.

"Our mission statement is to provide shelter to victims and to eliminate domestic violence," Sigler said. Although Sigler admits that eliminating domestic violence is a large task, H.E.R. won't back down from that goal.

"It gives us something to strive for," Sigler said. "We'd love to put ourselves right out of business by doing our job well."

H.E.R. was formed in 1985 out of a task force on family violence, which included Mayor Gloria O. Webb. Now, the shelter houses about 400 women and children altogether during a year's period, Sigler said.

Women in the six-bedroom shelter usually stay about 28 days, or as long as it takes for them to get on their feet, said. There are about 28 women and children living in the shelter currently, she added.

basically because they no longer feel safe at home due to physical abuse and psychological abuse, Sigler said.

So, while in the shelter, there are support groups for the women and for the children, Sigler said.

Often abused

Sue Sigler, executive director of Help and Emergency Response Shelter people think it's their fault they were abused, Sigler said. "None of us are perfect," she said. "Nobody deserves to be beaten." Women leave abusive relationships

Women who enter the shelter often have a low self-esteem, said Francesca Dillard, crisis services director for H.E.R. In the support groups, women get an understanding of domestic violence, learn how to deal with stress and learn relaxation techniques, she said. The clients also are shown how their abuser used power and control, she added.

And there is community living, where there are divided chores and all mothers take turns cooking, she added. There is a designated "Kids' Room" in the shelter, where children can play. However, the mothers must go in with their kids, Sigler said. "Some of the moms don't really know how to be moms," she said.

If a client leaves the shelter and returns to the abuser, H.E.R. does remain in contact with the woman,

FACTS ABOUT ABUSE

- Approximately 25 percent of women who use hospital emergency rooms do so as a result of battering.

- About 40 percent are beaten while they are pregnant.

- Of children from violent homes, 60 percent will grow up to be either perpetrators or victims of violence.

- Batterers occurs in all socio-economic, ethnic, racial, and age groups.

Bayville needs an investor

By LEE CAHILL
Virginia Beach Sun City Council Reporter

Bayville Farms Associates, Inc. has the land, a plan for golf course development described as one of the finest environmental designs - and a conditional use permit for a golf course granted last week by City Council.

The corporation now is looking for an investor interested in developing an 18-hole golf course on the property.

Tuck Bowie, project engineer, said that the permit will make the development more attractive to investors.

The property, 254.65 acres at 4137 First Court Road, he emphasized, will be for lease, not for sale. The land consists of two parcels. One, 248.77 acres, will house the 18-hole golf course and clubhouse and the other, 5.88 acres, will be used as a maintenance area and a conservation area. The design, prepared by Mary Heinrich, an environmentalist, is, said Councilmember Robert K. Dean "probably the finest environmental design."

Bowie said that the golf course is something Virginia Beach needs. Council has indicated it would like more golf courses in the city. The withdrawal of the country club from the plan has opened the possibility that the course that would be built there would be open to the public.

The permit application was approved unanimously by Council.

Nearby residents objected to the use permit.

Bush talks economics, not values

The president outlined a new six-point agenda

By JULIE C. BROWN
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

Instead of Clinton-bashing and preaching about family values, President George Bush took a solid stand on the state of the American economy and outlined a six point agenda to a crowd of 1,500 Christian Coalition members on Friday at the Founders Inn.

Although he did start his speech by saying, "In my mind, the family is the heart of America," and "The one sure way to make America more safe and secure is to make our families more safe and secure," Bush dedicated the remainder of his 25-minute speech to discussing education, the military and the unstable economy.

Bush's re-election agenda included a global trade strategy, education reform, strengthening small businesses, economic security, a revamped welfare system

A Conversation with . . .

Kathleen Siegel

By JULIE C. BROWN
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

Kathleen Siegel has done everything from waiting tables to working with an airline, to modeling. These days, she's comfortable with her position as director of sales for the Clarion Resort and Conference Center, Fifth on Atlantic Avenue at the Oceanfront.

Siegel has lived in Virginia Beach for five years, after moving here from Westfield, N.J. She now resides in Lagomar with her husband and three children.

A graduate of Union College in New Jersey, Siegel spent time in customer service with an airline. After that, she got involved in modeling, where she got interested in fashion and public relations, she said.

She's been with the Clarion for a year now, and likes helping customers with all their needs, she said.

"I like having the opportunity to meet many successful people in their careers and I enjoy helping them with conventions and their hotel needs," Siegel said.

Siegel finds herself busy now volunteering with the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce BizExpo Fashion Show. She is coordinating the event to be held on Thursday, Sept. 17 at 11 a.m. at the Pavilion.

The fashion show will highlight what the well-dressed business person would wear during the day, or to evening cocktail parties, Siegel said.

better at all times," she said. "No job is beneath anybody."

In her spare time, Siegel said she enjoys relaxing on the beach, her favorite part of living here. She also likes spending time with her family, watching movies and loves cooking gourmet foods.

Siegel maintains a positive attitude with everything she does, including her job she said. "I look at how I can improve everything and how I can make it better at all times."

Welcome to the weekend

Fall's moving in: temps in the 60s

According to the National Weather Service in Norfolk, the extended forecast for the area through Saturday is favorable. It will be partly sunny on Thursday and Friday with a high from the low to mid-80s. The low temperature will be in the upper 60s.

Wesley will be portrayed in play

John Wesley, an 18th-century British evangelist and founder of the Methodist Church, will come to life on Thursday, Sept. 17 at 7:30 p.m., at Virginia Wesleyan College's Hofheimer Theater, when actor Roger Nelson portrays Wesley in "The Man From Aldersgate." The program is free and open to the public. Because of limited space, reservations are requested. Call 455-3200 for information and reservations.

Wesley, born in 1703, traveled throughout Great Britain on horseback and preached 42,000 sermons. Nelson travels throughout the world on an airplane bringing Wesley back to life for his audiences.

Fun run to be held

Non competitive races of two and five miles will be held on Saturday, Oct. 10 at 8 a.m. along the Virginia Beach Boardwalk. They will start at 4th Street.

Registration is from 7 to 8 a.m. on the day of the races. Early registration is by mail to: SF-AMI, P.O. Box 2342, Virginia Beach. The entry fee of $10 includes a T-shirt. The events sponsored by area alliances for the mentally ill as part of National Mental Illness Awareness Week. For additional information call Keith Johnson at 430-0368.

Help with H.E.R.

Help Emergency Response (H.E.R.) offers a tremendous service to battered women and children in the area. If it weren't for this program, many women and children would have to return to abusive partners and face the possibility of more abuse and in extreme cases - murder.

Many of the workers at the shelter are volunteers who dedicate some spare time to assisting these women. Right now, the shelter is seeking more volunteers to help keep their program a success. There is a training session that will be offered during the month of October for new volunteers.

If you are interested in helping to eliminate domestic violence and want to help someone who has faced it personally, call H.E.R. at 393-7833.

Any spare you can give to help a woman get back on her feet would not only benefit the women and children, but will also help any non-abused individual see the horrors of what abuse is about. It could be an eye-opening and meaningful experience. - J.C.B.

No more empty promises

President Bush didn't spend a whole lot of time lecturing about family values and bashing his opponent while recently speaking to the Christian Coalition at the Founders Inn.

Instead, he focused on an impressive agenda, which wasn't filled with a lot of empty rhetoric. He loaded his speech with a plan and more importantly, a promise to Americans to do the best he can for our country.

There really isn't much else he can do. One man cannot change an entire nation and one man did not get the entire into debt, without jobs and without affordable health care. Without the cooperation of the Congress, one man will not get the United States out of this economic mess, either.

Enough said. - J.C.B.

If you could pick just two of the following, which would you pick: braids, looks, a good personality or wealth? Looks and a good personality.

What do you think is one of the biggest problems facing the world: Homelessness, hunger.

What do you think is one of the biggest problems facing Virginia Beach: Water need, more golf courses and to become more of a year round resort area.

What do you like most about Virginia Beach: Resort area beautification program has really cleaned up Atlantic Avenue. It's a clean, fun city to live in.

If you could spend 10 minutes alone with the President George Bush, what would you talk about?: Hey pal, Let's get this country back in order first before you direct all of your time and resources to other countries' problems and let's get the budget balanced.

History can't be rewritten; fly the Confederate flag

I was pleased to see that some semblance of reason is being applied in resistance to the complete abolition of the Confederate flag by those who would attempt to rewrite history.

While the Confederate flag is not flown at the Citadel, a military college in South Carolina, it is waved by fans at football games and the song "Dixie" is the Citadel's fight song.

That tradition will continue says Citadel's President Claudius Wains.

The reason given by those who want the flag abolished, is that it is a symbol of slavery and offends Afro-Americans. If that is a valid reason then the following steps should be taken immediately:

• Remove the names and pictures of all southerners who participated in the Civil War from the history books and stop teaching about it in the schools.

The time and money being spent on efforts to abolish the Confederate flag would be better spent on the homeless, the sick and cancer research.

• Sandblast the images of Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson and Jefferson Davis from the side of Stone Mountain Georgia.

• Tear down all Confederate monuments in all southern towns and cities.

• Blow up Andersonville, Ga. a former Confederate Military Prison.

• Tear down Lookout Mountain in Tennessee and destroy all Civil War battlefields, exhuming the bodies of all Confederate soldiers and transporing them out of the continental limits of the United States.

• Last but not least: all southerners with white faces who honor the Confederate soldiers who died in the Civil War should be deported because they are sure to remind someone of slavery.

How ridiculous can you get? The time and money being spent on efforts to abolish the Confederate flag would be better spent on the homeless, the sick, cancer research and a hell of lot other things more important than who waves a Confederate flag and sings "Dixie" at a ballgame.

Sure, history should be remembered - so that the bad things won't be repeated, but it cannot be re-written as some in this country would have it.

"What's past is prologue." We should all work together to make it a better world. Then the Confederate flag will no longer be a symbol of hatred. Love overcomes symbols.

Welcome to the real world.

its history and renew our commitment to its principles. Since we are in the midst of a presidential election, we might re-read Article II, and recall that no ballots were needed at the 1787 Convention before the delegates could agree on the method of selecting the President.

Political scientists assert that the presidency is the most innovative and daring invention in the American political framework. President Harry S. Truman, often cited during this current presidential campaign, said, "The Presidency is the most peculiar office in the world. There's never been one like it."

Historians claim that the biggest political story of the past two centuries was the creation of a country without a king. But the tradition of monarchy died slowly in America.

It seems incredible today, but at that convention, Alexander Hamilton proposed that the President hold office for life. Then, just prior to the installation of our First President, John Adams made a futile attempt to cling to royal trappings. He begged the Congress to give Washington an impressive title, suggesting "His Most Benign Highness." We still hear references to an imperial presidency.

Fortunately, our founding fathers left the presidency loose in definition. They trusted George Washington to invent a tradition as he went along. He understood this, and wrote in 1790, "All see and most admire the glare which hovers round the external trappings of elevated office. To me there is nothing in it, beyond the lustre which may be reflected from its connection with a power of promoting human felicity. In our progress toward political happiness my station is new; and if I may use the express, I walk on untried ground. There is scarcely any part of my conduct which may not hereafter be drawn into precedent."

Since that time, the presidency has continued to be a unique institution, made a piece at a time by successive men in the White House. Every man who has held this office has left his mark on a heritage that is till in lively development.

Beach recycling program is rapidly expanding

The residents of Virginia Beach have responded with enthusiasm to the recycling programs available in Virginia Beach. In calendar year 1991, the first year of the Commonwealth's mandate for recycling, every town, city and county was required to recycle at least 10 percent of their overall solid waste. In our case, we exceeded the goal and recycled 16 percent of our total solid waste stream. Without your participation this would not have been possible.

Some of our programs are very highly visible; the drop-off recycling centers and the expanding curbside programs are two good examples. Since the opening in September in 1990 of the 20 drop-off centers, we have seen the volume increase from a total of 13 tons of plastic, glass and aluminum per month, to 153 tons per month. That represents a 1,200 percent volume increase in material received from the public in the drop-off program alone for recycling. That's not to mention $68,967 in avoided disposal costs and the valuable space saved in the landfill. Since our initial opening we have supplemented some of our sites with larger containers, provided by the Southeastern Public Service Authority (SPSA) to handle the increase in volume.

Another very popular program that increases in size each year is the curbside recycling program. Presently, this program operated by SPSA is serving 14,700 homes in

Each year as this service expands more and more, residents will have the opportunity to participate. There are a possible 92,000 homes eligible to participate in this program. During the month of June 1992, this service collected a total of 193 tons of newspaper, glass, metals and plastic.

Newspaper recycling

at each of the public schools in Virginia Beach continues to grow each month. The beauty of this program to the taxpayer is the amount of avoided disposal costs that are saved. Since December of 1988 more than $377,000 has been saved by recycling the newspaper instead of throwing it away in the landfill. Landfill space is valuable, and through this program alone, 44,000 cubic yards have been saved. Also, each school receives $3 for every ton collected by its student body.

Our most recent success, resulting in the greatest volume and weight reduction, has been the yard waste collection program. Grass and leaves represent 20 percent of the waste that comes from our homes. Putting organic matter in the landfill to sit for eternity is simply a waste of material and valuable space. By collecting this material separately in clear plastic bags, for easy identification by our work force, we are transporting it to the Yard Waste Mulching Facility at the Virginia Beach Landfill. At this point, the material is mulched into a product that is excellent natural bed building material. This material is later sold to private businesses.

However, this organic material is available at no cost to the citizen. To date we have removed and recycled 47,723 tons of organic material. In addition, our material

provided by the Southeastern Public Service Authority (SPSA) to handle the increase in volume.

President Friday evening. The press were greeted by different signs, bumper stickers stating, "Tilt your head the news is slanted" and "I don't believe the liberal media."

At 8 a.m., 12 hours before the President would arrive, I picked up my credentials at the Founders Inn on Indian River Road. This was only the first of two press clearances that I had to go through. Then I left and was able to make it back to Great Bridge High School during first bell.

Later that day, five hours before the President's arrival, I was back at the Founders Inn. I was fortunate to grab the last place on the second level of the high risers set up for the press. I was 65 feet away from where the President would speak. No sooner had I set up my equipment and left the room when the Secret Service sealed off the room.

As they searched the room, men began to set up metal detectors outside of the entrances to the room. Immediately a line of people began to form, anxiously awaiting the President. I went through the second press clearance around 5 p.m. That only took a few minutes. I had to show that I worked for a legitimate news organization (in my case it was WFOF-FM, the radio station of the Chesapeake Public Schools). Armed with two press badges, I was now ready to wait outside the doors. The line that had started out single file, as was directed, was now a large body of people extending as far as the eye could see. The entire room was being searched by the Secret Service. What that entails, I do not know. I do know that dogs were barking periodically inside the room and someone took a picture on my camera while they were in there. The crowd was growing restless and the room was growing warmer as the hours passed.

Finally, around 6:45 p.m., the doors opened. First the employees of Founders Inn were admitted, then the press, followed by the guests. As I stood in line waiting to go through the metal detectors, one by one they went before me, men emptying their pockets and women setting their purses onto the table beside the detectors. The items were searched through and then given back to the owners.

The detector beeped as one man passed through and he was in-collected in the yard debris trailer program is recycled at the Yard Waste Mulching Facility.

Ongoing programs with less visibility, but also important, are the collection of white goods and tires for recycling. Residential collection of appliances (white goods) and tires at the curb are also part of a regional recycling program operated by SPSS. Recent changes in the environmental laws require that the appliances with coolants be handled separately.

This is also being accomplished. Since the inception of this program in the summer of 1990, we have recycled 350 tons of these materials.

Businesses in our city have also supported the recycling concept. Surveyed last year for their participation levels, we found that 10 percent of the commercial waste stream was being recycled without any sort of municipal or state mandate directed at the private sector in particular.

The Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce to this end has formed a task force to investigate the issues of growth for private sector recycling.

Assisting in this process is a feasibility study of private sector recycling in the city of Virginia Beach prepared by graduate students in the Department of Engineering Technology at Old Dominion University.

Although the collection of materials for recycling is important, it is only the tip of the iceberg. Without long-term viable uses for the materials being collected, recycling will suffer from an imbalance between supply and demand.

To end on April 28, 1992 I presented a Buy Recycled resolution to our City Council. This resolution promotes the use of recycled products wherever possible in our procurement practices.

A recent example of our commitment to this concept is the newly completed Dam Neck Road. All the sign posts used are made of plastic lumber. This product, due to its resistance to weather and insects, will reduce labor costs over a period of years, making the product a good purchase.

Having successfully exceeded our first recycling goal, we will be striving for even greater success in the years ahead.

This article was compiled through the courtesy of Debbie Devine, recycling coordinator for waste management, Virginia Beach Department of Public Works.

Bush talks economics and an amendment to balance the budget deficit.

Bush drew a standing ovation from the crowd members, who waved American flags and stood on chairs to show approval, when he called for an educational revolution.

"Parents, not the government, should decide which school is best for their children," he said amidst the shouts of excitement.

Bush also used the opportunity to slam the litigation system and attorneys. "America has become the land of the lawsuit," he said.

"As a nation, we need to sue each other less and start caring about each other."

And although he touched on the nation's need for affordable health care saying, "The intense pain should be at the doctor's office, not one month later when the bill comes," he neglected to pinpoint an actual plan that would help those in need of health insurance.

"I am going to keep trying to do what is right for our great country," he said.

HOV lanes

The Department of Transportation is claiming the success of the new HOV-2 lanes already. Ironically, some users are saying it's a bunch of bull.

But considering the amount of money that was spent on the lanes, about $127 million, it's doubtful that they wouldn't work. They may take some time to get used to, but given the fact that the Department of Transportation has passed their projection of 1,900 vehicles in the first week, the lanes will be sure to help ease traffic congestion in the future.

Maybe more motorists will see the HOV cars zooming in the designated lanes and wish it were them zooming instead of sitting and waiting for that accident to get cleared away.

By getting a riding partner, traffic could flow easier and people could sleep in a little later instead of having to plan it taking an hour just to get to work, when it should only take 30 minutes. - J.C.B.

Latin mass

Those Catholics who want something different than an English mass can now attend a Latin mass in Chesapeake.

A lot of hard work went into organizing the new mass and those interested in hearing a true Catholic mass should venture to Saint Benedict's in Chesapeake to check out what it's all about.

Now that it is sanctioned by the diocese, it's sure to be a continuous crowd-bringer in the Chesapeake area. But get there early because it's standing room only. - J.C.B.

Smoke alarms

Recently a fire on Oceanica Boulevard caused a man to die. The sad thing, however, is not only his death, but the fact that there was no smoke detector in the house.

If there had been smoke detector, a death could have been avoided. In order to protect your family and friends, be sure that you have a smoke detector in your house and check periodically to see that it is working properly.

It could save a life, maybe yours. - J.C.B.

Going to a hairstylist is machismo

I hope that the loyal readers of my column will indulge me while I make a confession that might be surprising to some.

To be perfectly candid, the reason for making this confession is that I got caught, and I want to tell it first before someone else does.

I have my hair done at a hairstyling and perm center in Great Bridge. The name of the establishment is Roger and Mardie on Battlefield Boulevard. I have been going there for 10 years.

Now, I can hear some saying, "So what is the big deal about that?"

The big deal is that for the most part of my adult life, I have tried to project a strong macho image to the public. I guess I felt obligated to do so because of my service in the United States Marines during World War II. Everyone knows that marines are macho with crew cuts. I wore a crew cut until the bald spots started to show and I had to let my hair grow long to cover them.

I have my hair done at a hairstyling and perm center.

Prior to going to Roger and Mardie's I had been having my hair cut at a regular barbershop and I am convinced that the barbers that I went to had at one time or the other served as hospital corpsmen in the United States Navy and cut her hair.

They would cut everyone's hair the same way, leaving the victim's head looking like a peeled onion. No matter what you asked for, they cut your hair as if you were in boot camp.

I finally decided to try something else. I drove to the hairstyling center and parked my car as far away as possible. I walked by the shop several times looking both ways, hoping one would recognize me. You might say I was like a preacher trying to get in and out of a liquor store without being seen. When the coast was clear, I darted in.

Once inside, I felt quite conspicuous but a lovely young lady at the cash register greeted me as if I had been coming there for years. Somehow I got through that first visit without incident and am now a regular patron.

I noticed that some of the men who go there have perms. I would too, but I don't have enough hair for the curlers to hold. I joke with my hairstylist, (a designer or a consultant on styles in beauty) Melody, about trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, but she must be doing a good job because I have noticed that my wife seems more attracted to me after my visit to the hairstyling center than at any other time.

Since I told her about Melody she goes with me. So come on guys, if you have never had your hair done at a hairstyling center, don't knock it till you try it.

Welcome to the real world.

New D.C. park honors Francis Scott Key

On September 21, 1814, the Baltimore American published a lyrical poem, written by a 35-year-old attorney the previous week. The story of how that poem was written and how it became our national anthem is well-known. But, not much is known about the author or the other lyrics he wrote.

This may soon be remedied. Next September 1993, the Francis Scott Key Memorial Park will be dedicated in the Class size is top priority

During the 80s, ensuring professional treatment came in as the highest priority of VBEA members in their annual surveys. Reducing class size has become their highest priority for the first two years of the 1990s. This could indicate that administrative efforts to treat teachers as professionals instead of tall children is paying off. Of the over 2,900 educators responding on the survey, 75 percent or 2,200 individuals selected reducing class size as a top priority.

Ensuring professional treatment came in second system-wide with 70 percent of the group selecting it as a top priority. The 10 highest priorities of members are shown in the chart below.

Top priorities for 1992 are: reduce class size; ensure professional treatment; compensate employees for all unused sick leave; reduce paperwork; relieve teachers of the performance of non-professional duties; compensation for college credit courses at the going rate; access to a phone in private setting for professional use; eliminate all unnecessary before

District of Columbia. It is located in Georgetown near the north end of the Key Bridge, and will transform the land from urban blight to a significant city retreat. After its dedication, the park will be presented to the National Park Service as a permanent monument, honoring Key.

Through a variety of efforts, the foundation is encouraging an awareness of his legacy. Francis Scott Key dedicated himself to furthering the ideals and goals of his young nation. He spoke eloquently for many causes, including the abolition of slavery and the establishment of public schools.

Three times he was appointed United States Attorney for Washington, D.C. President Jackson sent him to Alabama where he successfully negotiated a settlement between the state and the federal government over the Creek Indian Lands. He was, and continues to be and/or after school meetings; establish an early retirement program in Virginia Beach and provide for shared decision making in the schools.

What is known about the 2,878 people who completed the survey? At the elementary school level 1,805 teachers responded, 554 work the middle school level and 528 teachers were in the senior high school. Only 374 of the respondents were males and 75 percent of the respondents were married. Over half have 10 or more years of experience. VBEA members made up 65 percent of the respondents which is close to the percentage of VBEA members in the school system. As predicted, the top priorities of members were identical to that of members. The inclusion of non-members in the 1992 survey was for the purpose of gaining a larger number of respondents for measuring school level concerns.

Association representatives will be getting a full set of survey results at their Wednesday, Oct. 7 meeting. They will make the results available to their faculty councils and school planning councils to study and use in formulating school improvement plans. VBEA leaders will also receive a report that ranks the schools on 24 school climate and leadership indicators.

Educators were asked to strongly agree, agree, disagree and strongly to the statement, "Our superintendent is doing a good job." The one question client evaluation has shown wide swings with the last three superintendents in Virginia Beach.

a role model for all that is good about America.

It was my special honor to develop a patriotic poetry contest, sponsored by the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution and the Francis Scott Key Park Foundation, to honor Key and the National Anthem. This contest is open to sixth grade students in public, private and parochial schools nationwide. We hope to find another Francis/ Francis Scott Key!

Through an inter-library loan, I was recently able to obtain a copy of Poems of the Late Francis S. Key, Esq. (1857). It contains a detailed account of the incident leading to the writing of "The Star Spangled Banner." This informative essay was written by Chief Justice Roger B. Taney, who was married to Key's only sister.

Key apparently had two favorite pastimes - horseback riding and writing poetry. The little volume contains fifty-six poems, which vary from light and humorous to serious and religious. There are riddles, rhymes for family members, obituaries for lost friends, hymns and a tribute to one of his steeds.

I thought our local judges and attorneys would enjoy the following poem in legalize.

Petition for a habeas corpus

To the Honorable James Sewall Morsell, one
Of the Judges of the county of Washington:

May it please your honor to hear the petition

Of a poor old mare in a miserable condition,

Who has come this cold night to beg that your honor

Will consider her case and take pity upon her.

Her master has turned her out in the street,

And the stones are too hard to lie down on, or eat;

Entertainment for horses she sees every where,

But, alas! there is none, as it seems, for a mare.

She has wandered about, cold, hungry, and weary,

And can't even get in the Penitentiary,

For the watchman all swear it is more than they dare,

Or Mr. Edes either, to put the mayor there.

So she went to a lawyer to know what to do.

And was told she must come and lay her case before you,

That your injunction or ha.co. cor. would grant:

And if that means hay or cor, it is just what I want.

Your petitioner, therefore, prays that your honor will not fail, To send her to a stable and her master to jail;

And such other relief to grant as your honor may think meet,

Such as chopped straw or oats, for an old mare to eat.

With a trough full of these and a rack full of hay,

Your petitioner will ever, as in duty bound pray.

Knowledge is the key

For any organization to change from the use of traditional management techniques to "quality" management, its leaders must possess knowledge. But this means more than just knowing that change must happen - it is knowing what changes must actually take place.

According to Dr. W. Edwards Deming, four areas of knowledge that leaders must possess are (a) that the organization is a system (b) that variation is a fact of life, (c) that knowledge must be based on theory, and (d) that effective management of an organization includes optimizing its human resources. What distinguishes "managers" from "leaders" is their application of these areas of knowledge.

The organization as a system, Every organization that has an aim - a purpose - is a system composed of functionally related components whose goal is to fulfill the aim of the organization. The system must know what it is in business to do and must clearly communicate that purpose to all the components. Management is responsible for ensuring that all the parts of the system - the individual processes that make up the system as a whole - are working to accomplish their own aims, then the aim of the organization as a whole will not be fulfilled. As the organization changes in size and complexity and responds to changes in the outside environment, management must continually review the efforts of components to ensure that the overall aim of the organization is being maintained.

This will result in changes; and while changes are often viewed as the result of wrong decisions or a sign of weak management, those changes that move the organization toward better use of its resources to fulfill its aim should be seen as the result of management learning a better way to do things.

✓ Life is variation.

There will always be some degree of variation with everything that is done in the organization. People, services and products all vary one way or another. Management has the responsibility to determine the capability of each of the system's processes and to make changes to those processes as necessary.

Portsmouth resident takes part in hurricane relief effort

By STEVE ORR
Special Report

When David L. Killam left the pier at Naval Station, Norfolk on August 29, he was headed to do his part in rebuilding hurricane-ravaged South Florida. The 22-year-old petty officer aboard the USS Ponce admitted that he didn't know quite what to expect even after reading the news reports that outlined the devastation caused by Andrew's 140-to-160 mph winds.

Killam, who resides in Portsmouth with his wife, Melissa, did know, however, that he was part of a large military relief and humanitarian assistance mission that would involve 22,500 servicemen and women. During the three-day transit to Florida, Killam concentrated on what was ahead.

"Not every navy command gets the opportunity to give aid on our own shores," said Killam.

After arriving at the Port of Miami, the reality of the amount of destruction sobered the crew members of the Ponce. Describing the scene at nearby, hard-hit Homestead Air Force Base, one military officer said, "The tallest thing left standing there is a refrigerator."

Killam said the Ponce's initial role in "Operation Help From the Sea" included the delivery to Miami's port of 22 tons of chilled and frozen food, 21 tons of dried food and other relief supplies to be distributed to those in need.

Also embarked on the Ponce was an amphibious construction battalion of 120 navy Seabees and a detachment of helicopters able to provide over-the-shore heavy lift capability for construction vehicles.

Killam's ship, the Ponce, is an amphibious assault vessel. It was one of five naval ships initially deployed as a part of a joint task force formed to respond to Hurricane Andrew relief efforts.

Killam, who entered the service in 1990, is an electronics technician. "I'm responsible for the maintenance of our air-search radars and their related equipment," he explained.

Although the opportunity to be involved in humanitarian work was not in the forefront of Killam's thoughts when he joined the Navy, he soon discovered that this sort of mission is nothing new for the sea service.

Navy people have in the recent past provided assistance to victims of Hurricane Hugo and of the San Francisco earthquake, to the Kurds during Operation Provide Comfort, to Filipinos after the eruption of Mt. Pinatubo, and to Haitian migrants. Even as relief efforts were underway for Hurricane Andrew, on the other side of the world, Navy men and women were helping the people of Guam with the aftermath of Typhoon Omar.

According to Killam, the advantage of sending naval vessels to the scene of a natural disaster is that the ships like the Ponce are self-sufficient. Capable of making its own water and power, and bringing badly needed communications technology to an area where even the most basic of services have been destroyed, the Ponce also brings the additional assistance of skilled sailors like Killam who are ready to work.

"When the cry for help was raised, the Navy was there. I hope that the feeling of brotherhood expressed by all in this crisis is not forgotten," he said.

USS Bainbridge to celebrate its 30th anniversary on Oct. 6

The Norfolk-based nuclear-powered guided missile cruiser USS Bainbridge (CGN 25) will celebrate the 30th anniversary of her commissioning October 6. Former crewmembers and commanding officers are invited to take part in planned festivities.

Since the ship is located in the Norfolk Naval Shipyard, the birthday celebration will be held the preceding week to coincide with the shipyard's 225th anniversary celebration. The ship will be open for public visiting Saturday, October 3 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

A ship's picnic will be held in the Scott Center Recreation Facility adjacent to the shipyard. The picnic is to reunite old shipmates and greet new ones.

A birthday ball will be held on board the Spirit of Norfolk cruise ship October 4, from 6:30 p.m. to midnight. The evening will include dinner, dancing and live entertainment. The cruise will begin by sailing past USS Bainbridge.

Any former crewmembers and the families interested in attending these celebrations should contact Lt. (junior grade) David J. Baum at 396-1074.

Sullivan presents USS Anzio with a Battle Streamer award

Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan visited the USS Anzio (CG 68) recently to present the ship's crew with a Battle Streamer awarded for the Allied beachhead invasion of Anzio by the American Fifth Army. The World War II offensive liberated Italy from Hitler's troops. The Norfolk-based Aegean cruiser is named in honor of the men and women who served at Anzio.

Gen. Sullivan was accompanied by the Chief of Naval Operation, Adm.

Frank Kelso. Gen. Sullivan also gave the ship several photographs taken during the campaign.

Representatives of the Anzio Beachhead Veterans of World War II were invited to attend the ceremony on the ship's flight deck.

USS Anzio, the second ship to bear the name, was commissioned May 2, 1992, at the Norfolk Naval Station and is commanded by Capt. H. Wyman Howard.

Sawyer attends camp at Fort Bragg

William J. Sawyer, IV recently received practical work in military leadership at the ROTC advanced camp at Fort Bragg, Fayetteville, N.C.

The camp, attended by cadets normally between their third and fourth year of college, includes instruction in communications, management and survival training.

Successful completion of the advanced camp and graduation from college results in a commission as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army, Guard or Reserve.

The cadet is a student at East Carolina University.

He is the son of Army Reserve Lt. Col. William J. Sawyer of Virginia Beach, and Camilla F. Wise of Chesapeake.

Sawyer is a 1988 graduate of F.W. O'Connell High School.

Griggs is promoted to Air Force major

John R. Griggs has been promoted in the U.S. Air Force to the rank of major.

Griggs, an acquisition management officer, is the son of Arch O. Griggs of Portsmouth.

His wife, Kristine, is the daughter of George M. and Marian J. Rollins of Chesapeake.

Griggs is a 1968 graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School, and received a master's degree in 1982 from the University of West Florida.

Variation is the key to change of variation are "common" and "special." Simply speaking, common variation is the normal differences that occur in a process and often requires little or no action of the part of management; special variation is those differences that are clearly exceptional and out of the norm and usually require that management at least determine what has caused the variation.

Management must be careful not to confuse the two types of variation and react to common as if it is special, and visa versa. Action based on a wrong determination of the type of variation can worsen the process rather than improve it.

Let's say, for example, that you were checking your cholesterol level regularly over several months, and it was staying relatively constant. At your last trip to the doctor, however, the level was significantly higher than usual. That could be a special variation if the increase happened just because of what you had eaten the night before.

If you changed your entire diet based on the increase, you would be treating the special variation as if it were common variation - that is, you would be assuming that the level would be higher all the time now. Changing your entire diet just because of the effect of one meal would be unnecessary.

✓ Theory of knowledge.

Management is prediction.

Management of any process assumes some future outcome (including some risk of being wrong) based primarily on observations of the past. With a "theory of knowledge," a manager will predict a certain outcome of an action, compare that prediction with actual results over a period of time, and revise the theory as necessary. Without a theory, there is nothing to revise and experience doesn't mean anything.

For example, if I believe that a certain route between my home and the grocery store is the best route, but over time that route is frequently blocked by heavy traffic, then I may revise my "theory," and try another way to the store.

Without a theory of what is the best route, I would continue to travel the first route and be regularly held up by traffic. I would have learned nothing. Likewise, for an organization to change to a quality organization, its management must have a theory of knowledge and revise that theory as necessary.

✓ Optimizing human resources.

A manager must recognize that people are different from each other. People learn at different paces, in different ways; they are motivated differently - some internally and some by outside sources. People have the need to develop relationships with other people and they want to enjoy their work.

Much of the creativity that helps the organization change comes from the differences in its employees. Instead of trying to make employees to be alike, good managers see the differences as something that should be nurtured and preserved - both for the employee and the organization.

The city of Virginia Beach municipal government is giving its employees every opportunity to increase in the knowledge that will improve the quality of our services to the citizens and of our organization as a whole. While we are still developing expertise in this knowledge, we recognize that we can understand and apply it today.

Latin mass attracts hundreds

"Many are curious seekers and nostalgia buffs," he said.

But Forrest said he prefers the Latin mass to a vernacular mass because it is a bit more reverent.

"We prefer the old rite because it had more reverence," he said.

Rev. Abbaticchio, who hadn't really said a Latin mass since the 1960s and was still getting back into the swing of it, said he thought the large crowd was also seeking more reverence in that people think the Latin mass shows more reverence to the blessed sacrament in comparison to the vernacular mass.

"Some people think there's something mysterious about it," he said.

But one person who attended who didn't find any mystery in it and attributes the large crowd at the mass to curiosity is Gary Bates of Great Bridge.

Bates said now that the mass is sanctioned, more people will attend.

"The only reason a lot people came out there is because the bishop gave them permission," he said.

Bates has been attending Latin mass since 1979 and hasn't heard a mass said entirely in English since 1981, he said. He has attended Latin mass at the Days Inn in Virginia Beach, where it has been said the past few years, he said.

He sees the Latin mass as a symbol of unchanged faith and said the vernacular mass strays away from the true Catholic faith.

"The Latin mass is basically the symbol of unity of the church," Bates said.

So he prefers the Latin mass because it is closer to true Catholicism.

"The prayers reflect the notion of sacrifice," he said, whereas the vernacular mass doesn't really do that. "It's not a sentimental or nostalgic thing. You should know what your faith really stands for."

Bates said those who attend the mass for a feeling of nostalgia, are "barking up the wrong tree." Hopefully, he said, people will come to the Latin mass and realize, "Hey, this is the way it should be," and not the "watered-down church teachings" of today.

Forrest expects the large crowds to continue on Sundays, especially if people start telling other Catholics about the mass.

"My God, we'll bust the walls right out of the place," he said. "But we're getting off to a real good start."

He hopes that the same faces will continue to come to the masses and said there has been coffee socials after the mass.

Neptune weekend attracts 500,000, despite Danielle

Some events cancelled due to storm fear

By HATTON JORDAN
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

Though threats of tropical storm Danielle changed some of the Neptune Festival's scheduling, the 19th annual event turned out to be a big hit.

Local beachgoers and tourists ventured down to the Boardwalk to enjoy the surprise of sunshine during Boardwalk Weekend, the final days of the event.

"The city made a valiant effort to get the event out of the storm situation," said Bill Center, president of Virginia Beach Events Unlimited, which planned the event.

"We usually attract a large amount of people from northern Virginia and Washington D.C., but this year we lost some of these people because of the possibility of bad weather."

The 10-day event began Sept. 12, with the air show at Oceana Air Station, and concluded Sunday.

As usual the event featured a parade on Atlantic Avenue, from 14th Street to 30th Street, surfing competitions, volleyball tournaments, sand castles contests as well as five musical entertainments.

The weather conditions caused by Danielle not only changed tourists' plans it also altered some of the festival's schedule.

"We were supposed to have fireworks on Saturday night but the Virginia Beach Fire Department postponed them because winds were over 14 knots," said Buck Moss, chairman of this year's festival.

The fireworks were postponed to Sunday. A giant slide show on Saturday proved to be the perfect visual substitute. Because of threats of high winds, a viewing screen for the slides was not erected. A side of a hotel worked just fine.

"The festival was established by city and civil leaders to provide a venue for the end of the year celebration for local citizens."

Bill Center, president of Virginia Beach Events Unlimited

"We had the fireworks Sunday night instead," said Moss. "Also, we usually have Youth Day on the beach Saturday morning but this year the tide was too high. There was no beach space to operate on."

The catamaran races were also cancelled due to possible stormy waters.

Overall, organizers believe the Neptune Festival was a hit, attracting more than 500,000 people.

"We have about 2,000 volunteers make this whole festival happen. It's a major event," said Center.

A Virginia Beach policeman greets children during the 19th annual Neptune Festival, which brought sunny skies.

Center explained why the event was started 19 years ago.

"The festival was established by city and civic leaders to provide a venue for the end of the year celebration for local citizens after the summer. It has grown every single year."

Moss agreed. "It started when the people thought it was time to have a party for themselves. It's more or less a local party that has gotten bigger."

Money is generated by dozens of sponsors such as banks, and local radio and television stations, said Center.

Plans are already in the works for next year's affair.

"Next year is our big 20th anniversary festival and we have been planning for that since last year. We are always about 18 months ahead of schedule," added Center.

Moss said the committee has already set up a meeting for October to review how this year's festival went and to plan for next year's.

The King's Men, along with other local and business leaders, joined the procession at this year's parade. The festival, which cancelled some events due to potential weather problems, attracted more than 500,000 people.

Adult book stores must be at least 500 feet from homes

6 stores already in existence not affected by new rule

By LEE CAHILL
Virginia Beach Sun City Council Reporter

New city ordinances should make it harder for adult book stores to continue their proliferation in Virginia Beach.

The ordinances prohibit the stores from locating within 500 feet of any apartment or residential district, single or multiple-family dwelling, church, park or school.

Shore Drive area residents brought the problem to the attention of City Council when the stores started spreading from the Norfolk East Ocean View area to Shore Drive, after Norfolk cracked down on the establishments.

To meet the definition of an adult book store an establishment has to have 25 percent or more of its stock devoted to specified sexual activities or have one or more mechanical or electronic devices for viewing such materials.

Al Strazzullo, of Sign Pine Road, among the earliest residents to complain about the stores, said that he was delighted with the ordinances and believed they could be workable. He said he regretted, however, that the stores will not be required to have conditional use permits. "Let's see how it flies," he said.

He said that is unfortunate that the city has "a few business people who don't see the community as we do. They see only the bottom line."

The ordinances do not affect the adult book stores, approximately six, that already have located in the city.

Everett G. Johnsessee, of 3125 Basin Road, another early community watchdog, said that the civic leagues in the area endorse the ordinances.

The residents worked with city staff to come up with ordinances that were acceptable. The ordinances were adopted unanimously by City Council last week.

10,000 newly registered voters expected by Beach registrar

The Virginia Beach voter registration anticipates 10,000 newly registered voters before the close of the books on Oct. 3, 1992 at 5 p.m.

More than 13,500 Virginia Beach citizens have already registered for the presidential election since the beginning of the year, according to Dr. Marlene Hager, the city's registrar.

The largest single day for voter registration will be Oct. 3, when about 7,500 people are expected to register on this day. Hager said that a similar number registered on the final day in 1988.

All 74 Virginia Beach public schools are open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for voter registration until Oct. 2, 1991.

The Oceanfront, Kempsville and Bayside libraries will provide registration until 5 p.m. on Oct. 3, 1992. The Central Library will also be accepting registrations on that day.

Other sites open include K-Mart stores at Kemps River Crossing, Chimney Hill, Hilltop and General Booth Boulevard. Lynnhaven Mall, Pembroke Mall, Motorworld, Westminster Canterbury and Domino's Pizza on Newtown Road also have voter registration drives scheduled. All satellite offices will be open on October 3.

Call the voter registrar's office for the site nearest to you at 427-8683, Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Golf course enterprise fund doesn't support future debts

Virginia Beach Sun City Council Reporter

The city's golf course enterprise fund, although bolstered by a greens fee increase this year with a similar increase scheduled for next year, will not support the payment of debt for any new courses the city may want to develop in the future.

In presenting a plan of action for management and maintenance needs of the city's three existing public golf courses, Parks and Recreation Director Susan Walston told City Council that the enterprise fund was not set up to support such a debt.

Councilmember John D. Moss suggested that the city look at the rate structure "to see if we want to include future purchase" to develop new golf courses.

Reacting to questions raised by Councilmember Nancy Parker, Councilmember Paul J. Lanteigne said that he hoped she was not interested in raising fees to pay for new golf courses. He said that he thought that the fees charged should pay for the existing golf courses.

The plan of action presented by Walston last week includes:

• A master renovation plan for Bow Creek Golf Course - an architect, the Talbot Group of Virginia Beach, has been selected.

• Maintenance and improvements at the other two golf courses - Kempsville Greens and Red Wing.

• The hiring of a golf course manager who is expected to be on board by the first of the year.

• Policy changes - Greens fees will increase by $1 for 18 holes and 50 cents for nine holes at the beginning of the next golfing season, April 1, 1993. The greens fees were increased by the same amount on July 1 of this year.

Also, a golf card system was implemented. Golf cards, sold for $25 a year but only to Virginia Beach residents, entitle a player to a discount of $2 or more for 18 rounds of golf. Other discounts are available to seniors, juniors and ladies, but with no residence restrictions.

Discounts are limited to special times and days. Green fees, which

Codes of Student Conduct sent home

It takes only one incident of real ugliness in a school - one assault on a teacher, one case of a weapon in the building, one racist or sexist slur - to create tension and hostility. One such incident, and parents wonder whether their children are safe in school.

Teachers begin to feel that school is some kind of combat zone, not a place where they can prepare students for adult life.

Students begin to feel afraid and uncared for. These outcomes of violence and hostility are not what the city of Virginia Beach desires for its children, its teachers, its own health and happiness. Indeed, as your superintendent, I believe the sights of Virginia Beach citizens are much higher.

School environments that support learning.

I believe that, as a community, we want to provide school environments conducive to student learning and growth. If we should sketch out what an ideal school would be like, we would see a place where every single person within that school - parents, educators, support staff and students - would feel a sense of belonging, of safety and security, of trust and respect. We would look for a strong and enduring web of human relationships that would support personal growth and learning for everyone. We would expect strong and steady guidance for our young people from adults who serve as good examples of appropriate conduct.

And we would have high expectations for the academic and social achievement taking place in that kind of ideal school environment. We would expect that the teachers, the parents, the students, and all others would be committed to providing and getting a good education and to developing as productive citizens in a democratic nation.

Fortunately, in Virginia Beach, we often come close to that ideal picture of a school. Most of our students are exemplary young citizens, and we are very proud to see them growing, maturing and preparing well for their approaching adult responsibilities.

Expectations for student conduct.

Sometimes, however, misbehavior disrupts the supportive learning environment for our children and teachers need, and threatens the safety and security of the school. In order to spell out the consequences of disruptive student actions and to communicate clearly our expectations for student conduct, the School Board has approved a "Traditional Discipline" plan. The School Board has supported this overall policy with numerous regulations, and systemwide committees have revised our Codes of Student Conduct. The regulations and the Codes of Student Conduct are quite clear about where and when the rules apply. They apply to student behavior on school property, on the way to and from school, and at school-related events and activities. The committees prepared in Elementary Edition for grades K-5 and a Secondary Edition for grades 6-12. The text for the Elementary Edition is somewhat simpler than the text for the Secondary Edition, nevertheless, regulations and procedures are the same for all students.

To let parents (and guardians) and students know our expectations, we have sent individual copies of the Codes of Student Conduct home with each and every student in Virginia Beach public schools. In my role as superintendent, I have requested that parents and students discuss these behavior expectations together, then return to the school the signed verification form in the packet. This step is critically important in fulfilling our obligation to inform families about their rights and responsibilities in educating their children. In addition, the individual schools are supplying their students with school handbooks that give specific information about the particular school.

Breaches of discipline.

In maintaining a safe and secure environment for learning, teachers and principals must respond quickly and firmly whenever the following actions occur: fighting; abusive language directed toward a teacher or another student; student actions that disrupt the class to the extent that the teacher's authority is challenged and that the teacher is losing control of the class; student actions which indicate the use of drugs, alcoholic beverages or other behavior-altering controlled substances; student actions that present a danger to the safety and well-being of anyone in school.

When these actions occur, they threaten the integrity of the school; they cannot be overlooked or taken lightly. School Board regulations and the Codes of Student Conduct require teachers to make immediate disciplinary referrals to the principal or assistant principal whenever any one of these cases occurs.

In addition, School Board regulations list the ten offenses which are so serious they require recommendations for expulsion. These offenses are: arson or attempted arson; assault and/or battery of an employee or student; possession, use, or sale of a firearm or dangerous weapon; manufacturing, growing, distribution and/or sale of drugs or drug paraphernalia; extortion; attempted extortion, robbery and/or larceny; immoral conduct; hazing; unlawful assembly and/or riot; possession, use, distribution, sale, lighting, or discharge of explosive devices; and criminal activity which resulted in or could have resulted in injury to others, regardless of where the crime occurred.

Besides explaining how to handle such serious matters as these, the School Board regulations and the Codes of Student Conduct spell out the complete list of behaviors warranting serious disciplinary action, procedures for suspension and expulsion, and the process of appeal. We hope that these stringent and rigorous measures will not be needed, but we are committed to enforcing them fairly whenever it is necessary to maintain safe, secure schools in Virginia Beach. As adults and public officials, we hope to ensure that our children's rights to education is not diminished by misconduct on the part of a few students.

Matters of jurisdiction.

I have already mentioned that "Traditional Discipline" policy and regulations encompass the entire school and extend both to travel to and from school and to attendance at school-related events and activities. It is also important to clarify matters of jurisdiction within each school.

Teachers often feel reluctant to discipline students who are not assigned to their classes or homerooms, for fear of infringing upon another teacher's prerogatives. But this timidity leaves the door open to false student claims, such as "you're not my teacher, so I don't have to do what you say." That attitude works against maintaining mutual respect and trust. Rather, in building an appropriate sense of community to support learning, all the adults within a school deserve respect from all the students, just as all the students deserve respect from all the adults. All teachers have responsibilities for correcting student behavior wherever and whenever it occurs, and they own no apologies to anyone for discharging this responsibility.

Each school staff created its student handbook, it had to come to grips with such questions of jurisdiction. Teachers and principals have had to talk through old habits and practices and recognize the consistency of their adult roles throughout the school and at all school-related events. I have asked each school staff, as the school year progresses, to continue to discuss how to ensure that rules and regulations are applied consistently, fairly, and in a caring manner. We must continually think about the "bigpicture," which is that we are creating safe, secure schools where students, parents and educators alike can live and learn together.

We must realize that the purpose of discipline is neither the self-aggrandizement of adult authorities nor the making of permissive excuses for nonacceptable behavior. We must keep in mind the old saying that "the purpose of discipline is self-discipline" and we incidents of misbehavior as teachable moments to help young people learn to improve their own behavior and gradually assume the responsibility for themselves that will mark their entry into adulthood.

The context for success.

Building an environment conducive to learning depends on the quality of all the individual relationships developed among the people within that environment, as well as on the presence of clear expectations and consequences. As adults who are sensitive to the fragile nature of human relationships, we must avoid the use of sarcasm, humiliation and intimidation: these strategies only serve to poison relationships. They do not create respect and trust among teachers and students.

On the other hand, the old strategy of listening - truly listening, deeply listening - deserves much use. When adults listen to students, the adults learn a lot about students' lives, outlooks, hopes and dreams. Then adults can begin to understand students' view of the world. That understanding gives adults new clues to working successfully with students. Of course, information gleaned from intimate conversations must never become gossip for the lounge. As a matter of ethics, teachers must maintain professional confidentiality about conversations, just as they would about student records. And as a matter of practicality, it's simply that gossip about private topics violates trust in a relationship and therefore upsets one of the basic ingredients in building a sense of community.

Perhaps the most important element in considerations of discipline is the instructional program itself. We don't always think of classroom instruction in this way; but when we do, it's easy to see that it's critically important to engage students in the curriculum, get them "turned on" to academic achievement - in other words, ensure success in learning. The classroom structure can provide learning tasks and activities to meet the needs and preferences of students of every learning style. Any subject matter can be presented in a variety of ways: group discussions, lectures, films, projects, and role-plays and drama. Students' interest is a vital factor in student learning and motivation. I am not suggesting that school is for entertainment, but I am stating clearly that a lively, enriched program does much to eliminate discipline problems before they begin.

Another element in discipline is the role of student activities. We may call these "extracurricular," but they are not "extra." They are vital to an environment conducive to learning. Why? Because student activities give young people the chance to make a direct investment of time and energy in their school, participate, to feel they belong there. They require the faculty's time and commitment; they often involve parent and community volunteers; and they serve our children immeasurably. We may be tempted to let school activities slide, but we should resist the temptation. School activities are not a frill, they are an arena for learning things students don't learn in the formal program and for applying things they do learn there.

Let me also say a word here about administrative support for teachers. In general, administrators must support their teachers in matters of discipline. When a principal or assistant principal disagrees with a discipline referral, or she should meet privately with the teacher to resolve the disagreement. Making a mistake is, after all, not a sin, for an administrator or a teacher. This year, as each school continues its faculty discussions about "Traditional Discipline," teachers and principals will be solidifying definitions of misconduct and procedures that perhaps now are only words on paper. This process of "buying into" policies and regulations will help all of us communicate more clearly with one another. We must give this process time and recognize that misunderstandings will lessen as we work together. As we become more familiar with the new policies and regulations, we will be able to achieve our goal of 100 percent support in enforcing them.

Working toward safe, secure schools.

The reader may well question why the superintendent of a large school division should concern himself with matters of discipline at all. A superintendent, after all, does not have a day-to-day role in enforcing school rules, correcting student misbehavior, or explaining appeal procedures to parents. Nonetheless, the superintendent's role in matters of discipline addresses an overwhelmingly important issue - the issue of public confidence in our schools. When the citizens in a community think schools are unsafe or not conducive to learning the School Board has difficulty in finding financial and administrative support for buildings, hiring sufficient teachers, providing staff development, and in general developing public schools to be proud of. Thus, matters of discipline are supremely important in creating public confidence.

This is why I have taken such a strong personal stand in support of "Traditional Discipline," and this is why I will continue to work toward creating appropriate learning environments in all our schools. The citizens of Virginia Beach - and their children - deserve every opportunity to be proud of their schools.

I trust your interest and support for this policy and invite your comments to this paper or by letter to me privately. Your feedback is an important element in making this policy work successfully.

guy, to be the best naval officer I can. I wanted to prove that women can do whatever the job calls for and what I got was treated like trash. I wasn't one of them." Now could it be possible that Lt. Caughlin tried too hard to "be one of the guys?"

It is biologically impossible for her to "be one of the guys." That is a shame because if all servicewomen could "be one of the guys" then the U.S. government could have saved millions of dollars in alterations on living quarters and restrooms at military installations, especially the latrines.

It is historically evident that the U.S. government has never been able to use good judgement when an emotional issue is involved. The tendency seems to be to overkill - throw the baby out with the bath water.

I'm afraid that is the case with Taillhook. I'm a little surprised that Ted Kennedy, the protector of women's rights, has not joined Pat Schroeder in her effort to emasculate the U.S. Navy. I don't think the Chappaquiddick hero has the stomach for that.

of immigrants and refugees each year, according to the subcommittee, and, as a result, a crucial need exists for adequate services which cut across all human resource agencies, including education, health, daily life skills, labor, housing and mental health and substance abuse.

To determine the extent of need and to evaluate current as well as prospective programs, the subcommittee has reserved this opportunity for public input.

Should you desire to speak, register prior to Wednesday, Oct. 14 with Bob Mathias, assistant to the city manager, city of Virginia Beach at 427-4242.

For the hearing to have optimal results, if you are a member of or know of an organized group which may have an interest in participating, coordinate your participation through it. Because the subcommittee cannot accurately anticipate who needs for interpreters, each person or group must make adequate arrangements.

Speakers are requested to limit presentations to three minutes to allow the subcommittee to hear from as many individuals as possible. If you prefer not to speak but desire to make written comments, mail your statement to: E. Gayle Nowell, research associate, Division of Legislative Services, General Assembly Building, 910 Capitol Street, Richmond, Virginia 23219.

became effective on July 1, are $15 during the summer and $13 during the winter for 18 holes at Red Wing and $9.50 and $8.50 for nine holes. With a card, players pay $11 and $8 year-round.

At Bow Creek and Kempsville Greens, the fees are similar except that the summer fee for 18 holes is $14 for nine holes, $9 summer and $8.50 winter, and nine holes with a card, $6 summer and winter rather than $7.

The projected increase in revenues from the increased fees is $150,000. Jan Bella, administrative analyst said that no projections have been made for revenue increases from next year's scheduled increase.

Since discounted play approximates 60 percent of golf course revenue, the report notes that further evaluation of requirements and numbers of discounts granted should be reevaluated. The report states that golf course discounts should be geared toward Virginia Beach residents and assessed to insure that they at least match the actual cost per round.

Lanteigne said that he did not mind Virginia Beach senior citizens taking advantage of the discounts, but did not believe that the same privilege should be extended players from other cities.

Like other councilmembers he thought that a manager was a good idea. He said that it is apparent that for a number of years the management of the public golf courses did not cope. With a manager, he said, there would be more accountability.

Walston said that the job description for the manager includes a working knowledge of golf courses, but that the applicant may or may not have an agronomy degree.

An ounce of preventive services

THE LYNNHAVEN FISH HOUSE RESTAURANT

If health promotion efforts targeted at older adults were considered an "ounce of prevention," the benefits older people would realize would be worth far more than a "pound of cure." In fact, some health care experts believe health promotion measures can prevent or postpone 80 percent of all health problems.

Prevention is the key

promotion may focus only on primary prevention, actions that people can take on their own to improve their health such as eating right, exercising and using medicines safely. There's another level of prevention which people can't do on their own: preventive services. These services require the help and expertise of health professionals.

Preventive services are important because they can prolong lives and improve the quality of life later years. Many serious conditions can be prevented or managed more effectively if detected early. Unfortunately, many older adults are reluctant to seek preventive tests and screenings because they attribute their symptoms to "just getting older." Typically, many older adults wait until a disease has progressed significantly before seeing their doctors. At that point, prevention is impossible and treatment less effective.

Older attitudes towards prevention

Focus groups conducted by the U.S. Office of Disease Prevention and Health Promotion and the American Cancer Society found that most older people:

✓ Go to the doctor only when something is wrong.

✓ Have trouble with the idea of having tests done when they have no symptoms or concern.

✓ Rely on their doctors to recommend preventive tests or screenings.

✓ Don't know how to ask for tests, what tests they need or what to expect from tests they have taken.

✓ Are embarrassed and fearful of discomfort and positive results.

In addition to these barriers of attitudes, perceptions and knowledge, there are other barriers older people encounter when seeking preventive services. The largest obstacle is probably Medicare, which offers only limited coverage for preventive services. Medicare does not cover regular checkups, or vision or hearing tests.

A full understanding of the potential barriers older people perceive to preventive services is essential for professionals who are promoting effective health screenings.

Making smiles last a lifetime

More than 60 percent of older Americans still have their own teeth. Good teeth and the smiles they let you share can last throughout your life, if you follow some healthy tips:

✓ See your dentist regularly, whether or not you still have your own teeth.

✓ Ask your dentist whether any of your prescription or over-the-counter medications cause dry mouth, which, in turn, can lead to serious dental problems. Ask what drugs might be substituted or what precautions you can take.

✓ Find out if you qualify for reduced-fee or low-cost dental care. Many public health and dental school clinics offer such services. Call your local dental association or society, or county health department to find out what's available.

VIRGINIA: IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH

LINDA JO STIET, PETITIONER v.

AMAR STIET, deceased and

KASEY AMAR STIET, an infant and DEFENDANTS

ORDER

THIS MATTER came to be heard upon the amended application of Linda Jo Stiet, widow, by counsel, pursuant to Chapter 5 of Title 64.1 (64-1, 105, et seq.) of the Code of Virginia (1950 as amended) and, upon the evidence submitted to the Court, the Court hereby finds as follows:

1. That at all times relevant hereto, the applicant was the wife of Amar Stiet.

2. That Amar Stiet and Linda Jo Stiet separated on or about July 15, 1984; that Amar Stiet was last seen and spoken to by Linda Jo Stiet on or about December 15, 1985; that Linda Jo Stiet knows of no other person who has seen or spoken to Amar Stiet since on or about December 15, 1984; that Linda Jo Stiet has consistently tried to locate Amar Stiet for more than 7 years to

3. That the only known property interest of Amar Stiet is a parcel of land known as described in Exhibit A attached hereto, which is jointly owned with Linda Jo Stiet as tenants by the entirety with rights of survivorship; said property being in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia and commonly known as 1021 Birnam Woods Dr., Virginia Beach, Virginia.

4. That as of the date of his disappearance, Amar Stiet had only two children which were born of the marriage with Linda Jo Stiet, to-wit: Kasey Amar Stiet, born April 29, 1981 and Yamina Roseanna Stiet, born August 9, 1982; that said children have been named as party defendants and a guardian ad litem has been appointed to protect their interest; that no other children are known to have been born to or adopted by Amar Stiet.

5. That the applicant has made out a presumption of death.

6. That your applicant believes and therefore alleges that Amar Stiet is dead.

7. That more than seven years have elapsed since the disappearance of Amar Stiet, to-wit: Since on or about December 15, 1984.

8. That Amar Stiet had no will and the applicant does not desire a grant of letters of administration.

Having so found, it is hereby

ADJUDGED, ORDERED and DECREED that the applicant, Linda Jo Stiet, had made out the legal presumption of death and that Amar Stiet is dead; and it is further ORDERED that this Order be published once a week for four successive weeks in the Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper published in the City of Virginia Beach requiring Amar Stiet, if alive, or any person on his behalf within 2 weeks from the date of the last insertion to produce to the Court, or the judge thereof in vacation, satisfactory evidence of his continuance of life, it is further ADJUDGED, ORDERED and DECREED that this matter be continued to October 16, 1992 at 9:30 a.m. for such further proceedings as may be necessary.

EXHIBIT "A"

ALL THAT certain lot, piece or parcel of land with the improvements thereon, lying, being and situated in the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, designated on a certain subdivision plan entitled, "Amended Plat of Birnam Woods, Parts 1 and 2, Section of Chatham Hall," recorded in the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, in Map Book 119, at page 54, as Lot 27, Block A.

I ask for this

Rules Of The Game

In each of the boxes you will find at least one football game which is to be played this week.

All you have to do is FIRST . . . Read the ads and decide which team will win. Write the name of the advertiser and the winner on the blank. SECOND . . . mail your entry form to FOOTBALL, P.O. Box 1327, Chesapeake, VA 23327, or fax it to us at 548-0390 before 5 p.m. on Friday.

Winners will be announced each week in the paper.

In case of a tie, the winner will be decided by the TIEBREAKER score. Write the score that you think will come closest to the actual total points scored for that game. Any tie entries after the tiebreaker will split the money.

Winners will receive "Football Bucks" redeemable for merchandise at the participating merchants on this page. Entries must be on an official entry form.

LOWER YOUR AUTO INSURANCE PREMIUMS

NATIONWIDE will give you an extra 10% discount on each car and 10% discount on your homeowners if you insure both with Nationwide.
